Words from 'The Witness'

After a while this will beat a drum for the philosophy and the policies of President Kennedy.

Whittaker Chambers, the ex-Communist whose testimony convicted Alger Hiss, and whose book "Witness" is considered by many a classic on the subject, said in that volume:

"The revolutionary heart of communism... is a simple statement of Karl Marx: 'Philosophers have explained the world; it is necessary to change the world.' 'Communists,' said Chambers, speaking from his own years in the party, 'are bound together by no secret oath. The tie that binds them across the barriers of nations, across the barriers of language and differences of class and education, in defiance of religion, morality, truth, law, honor and the weakness of the body, is a simple conviction: It is necessary to change the world. Their power, whose very nature baffles the rest of the world, because in a large measure the world has lost that power, is the power to hold convictions and act on them....'

We may now take up the drumsticks and beat a drum for Mr. Kennedy.

In his two speeches in South America he had the courage to admit the errors of history, and to say that unless the world of Latin America was changed, not merely it but Western civilization would be in jeopardy.

Old Formulae

The President was saying that the old formulae inherited from days of Spanish colonialism was senseless and wrong in today's world, and that unless reforms are produced by those few who owned all the arable land and held tight control on the total wealth and production of it, all the Western world would be in danger.

Whittaker Chambers, in his analysis of communism, wrote: "Have you the moral strength to take upon yourself the crimes of history so that man at last may close his chronicle of age-old, senseless suffering and replace it with a purpose and a plan? The answer a man makes to this question is the difference between the Communists and the miscellaneous socialists, liberals, fellow-travelers, unclassified progressives and men of good will, all of whom share a similar vision, but do not share the faith because they will not take upon themselves the penalties of faith. The answer is the root of that sense of moral superiority which makes the Communists, though caught in crime, berate their opponents with withering self-righteousness."

We have groups of ardent, right-wing conservatives who attack the President because he proclaims his faith and his willingness to take upon himself the personal and political penalties of it. They assail him as trying to socialize medicine because of the problem of our increasing millions of poor and indigent old. They damn him for taxes and for setting up what they call a welfare state... and so on and on.

Same Voices

These same voices insinuate or say that he is soft on communism because he does these things.

This extreme right detests taxes, which are the price we pay for civilization. They yearn for the old days of unrestricted, rugged individualism such as existed.

These persons also seem to feel they have had a divine revelation which gave them, and them only, an understanding of the Communist threat. They warn against paperback books in the drug-stores, as if Americans had no common sense or judgment at all. They warn us that communism is an international conspiracy which subverts liberty, a fact known to any average American for at least a quarter century.

They ignore the fact that our great secret weapon is our freedom—that and that what we must accept is responsibility for that freedom—that we must have faith in our institutions, not weaken them with suspicion and doubt.

John Kennedy has spoken strongly in behalf of this nation's purpose and plan for a changing world. It is a time for faith and belief in ourselves—and in what this nation has proclaimed in its coins, in its Declaration, in its Constitution.

Whittaker Chambers said it well.

Woodrow Wilson's Wife Dies

President's Illness
Gave Power to Her

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, 89, described as the most powerful person in the United States during the illness of the World War I president, died Thursday night.

The former first lady had been suffering from a respiratory ailment and complications. She passed away at 10:45 p.m. at the home to which she and Wilson retired when he left the White House in 1921.

Her doctor described the cause of death as "hypertensive heart disease with congestive failure."

The death of the former Edith Bolling, a widow when she married Wilson in 1915, left only three living former first ladies. They are Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Mrs. Harry S. Truman and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

LED QUIET LIFE

Her marriage to Wilson, then a widower, was the third and last time a U.S. chief executive married while in office. John Tyler and Grover Cleveland also were married during their terms in the White House.

Mrs. Wilson's illness forced her to miss the dedication Thursday of a Potomac River bridge here named for her husband. Thursday was the 105th anniversary of his birth.

The Virginia-born former first lady led a generally quiet life after Wilson died in 1924. She published the story of her life in 1939. She was a guest speaker at President John F. Kennedy's inauguration and he recently named her to the United Nations Freedom from Hunger Committee.

DURING HIS ILLNESS

After Wilson suffered a stroke in 1919 during a speaking tour in his unsuccessful effort to persuade America to join the League of Nations, Mrs. Wilson became his main link to the outside world.

With the President paralyzed, Mrs. Wilson acted as his private secretary. She received memoranda on vital official matters and decided which Wilson should see. She also decided which officials were allowed to visit the sick room.

Under her care, Wilson gradually recovered and, although he

FIANCE HELD AS KILLER

This Was to Be Her Wedding Day

By a Staff Writer

CONYERS—"We were going to get married today," a 15-year-old girl said glumly Thursday as she sat on a bench in the Rockdale County jail waiting to be charged in connection with the slaying of two former boy friends.

The girl, her 20-year-old fiancé, Charles Byrd, and a 15-year-old boy are being held in connection with the shotgun killing of Douglas Wayne Henderson, 16, and William Thomas (Tommy) Henderson, 14, Sheriff J. T. Wallace said.

Late Thursday, warrants charging two counts of murder against the trio were issued by Justice of the Peace Willie Hicks of Conyers.

The girl said she and the two boys met the Henderson brothers and James Michael Flanagan, 16, at the Moonlit Drive-in Theater near Conyers Wednesday night.

She said Charles Byrd invited the other boys over to the Byrd car to go for a ride. But, she said, when they got in, Charles placed leg irons on them.

"I didn't know what to think," she said. He said he was just going to talk to them."

However, the girl said that Charles had earlier told her that he had planned to kill the Henderson brothers, the Flanagan boy

350 in Capital Flee Bomb Call

WASHINGTON (AP) — An anonymous telephoned bomb threat forced about 350 federal employees to leave their downtown government building at midday Thursday.

An intensive search of the Immigration and Naturalization Service building failed to turn up any bomb. But the workers were given the rest of the day off.

A second cold wave whistled into tourist-packed Florida late Thursday, bringing frost warnings.

Swainsboro Court Official Indicted in Theft, Extortion

SWAINSBORO — The Emanuel County Grand Jury has indicted the Swainsboro city court solicitor on one count of extortion and two counts of larceny after trust.

H. Alonzo Woods, who took office 11 months ago, is charged in the indictments with "converting to his own use" money collected for the court.

Woods is expected to go on trial in Emanuel Superior Court in January.

Three counts against Woods involves $143.50. The indictments were handed down at the closing session of the grand jury this week.

The extortion charge centers around a $28 check signed by M. G. Lamb. The grand jury charged Woods with taking the check "under the pretext of disposing of a case in the City Court of Swainsboro against Henry Gene Lamb, charging said Henry Gene Lamb with the offense of speeding." The presentment further charged that Woods "converted said $28 to his own use."

In one of the "larceny after trust" presentments, the Grand Jury alleges that Woods had been "entrusted by Sammie F. Dukes with $63... for the purpose of using the same to pay a fine and court costs arising out of a charge against said Sammie F. Dukes for speeding."

The presentment says that Woods "after having been so entrusted with said money, and after failing to apply said fine and court costs, did wrongfully and fraudulently and feloniously dispose of said money and did convert the same to his own use, and to his injury..."

The other indictment centers around a check for $52.50 allegedly written by Cecil Scott.

Slayer of 2 Schemed To Kill 9 of Girl's Boy Friends, Sheriff Says

Boys, Girl Accused Of Murder

By CHARLES MOORE
Constitution Staff Writer

CONYERS—A 20-year-old care taker's plan to kill nine acquaintances of his 15-year-old girl friend resulted in the death of two teenage brothers and the serious wounding of a third boy, Rockdale County Sheriff J. T. Wallace said Thursday.

Sheriff Wallace said Charles Byrd, 20, his girl friend and a 15-year-old boy all were charged with murdering Douglas Wayne Henderson, 16, and William Thomas (Tommy) Henderson, 13, whose bodies were dumped into an abandoned well.

LINED THEM UP

The sheriff said Byrd, whom he described as mentally unbalanced, lined up the Henderson brothers and 16-year-old James Michael Flanagan in the path of his car's headlights and blasted them in the head with three shots from a 16-gauge shotgun, held about a yard away.

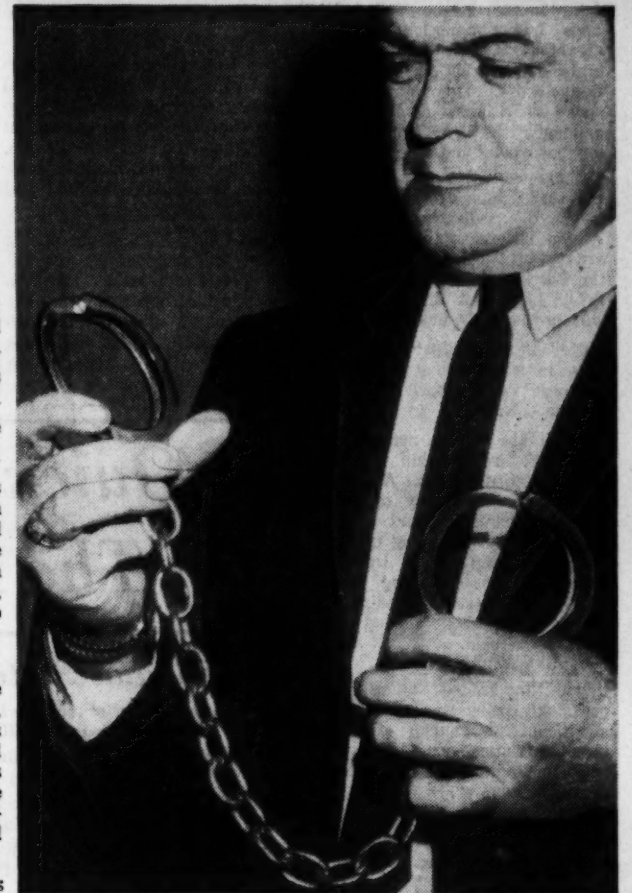

The Flanagan boy, hit first, was blasted to the ground; then the Henderson boys were shot down. Sheriff Wallace said that Flanagan jumped up and escaped into the darkness while Byrd was dumping the bodies of the Henderson boys into a dry 20-foot well.

SURVIVOR GIVES ALARM

"If the Flanagan boy, who had been shot first, had been thrown in first, I don't know when we'd have found their bodies," Sheriff Wallace commented.

Flanagan, badly wounded and bleeding heavily, ran down a dirt road that had been turned into a quagmire by heavy rains. Despite a fractured skull and mangled left arm, he ran about two

We had just put the children to bed and were watching television in our night clothes. I had thought about going bowling earlier that night, but decided I was too tired and stayed home.

Suddenly, in the middle of our television program, there was a pounding on the door. I grabbed my pants to run to see who it was. When I flipped on the carport light, I was speechless.

Leaning against the door was a dark-haired youngster, covered with blood and mud. It was raining outside. I hesitated to open the door. My first thought was that he had been in a wreck. Then he screamed in pain and said:

"Mister please help me get to a doctor. I mean you no harm. I've been shot and my buddies have been shot, too."

Still not knowing what to believe, I told him to wait there a minute and I would call him an ambulance. While my wife called the ambulance and the sheriff (J. T. Wallace), I got a hot wet towel and went back to see about him.

I tried to get him to sit down, but he said he hurt too bad when he sat down. He was leaning on my car and walking back and forth with blood everywhere. He said:

Don't Know Why I Stole $2,400, Says Bank Aide

MACON (UPI)—A trusted bank employee who said she does not know "why I stole the money" was charged in federal court Thursday with the embezzlement of $2,400 from an elderly spinster's safe deposit box.

Mrs. Montine Fordham, a 43-year-old grandmother who works as vault attendant at the Citizens and Southern National Bank here, confessed after taking a lie detector test. The FBI said $500 of the money has been recovered.

Mrs. Fordham at first had concocted a story of being accosted by an armed bandit wearing rubber gloves who came to the basement vault of the bank and aimed a pistol at her.

She said the bandit, appearing shortly after noon Wednesday, produced a box key, forced her to provide the bank's matching key and made her open a box that had been rented by Miss Maggie Hawkins.

Mrs. Fordham said the thief, after taking an envelope containing $2,400 in large denomination bills from the box, took $335 from her desk which she had brought to the bank for deposit.

After more than 15 hours of continuous questioning by police and federal agents, Mrs. Fordham broke down at 5:30 a.m. and signed a one-page confession that she had engineered the whole thing.

"I do not know why I stole the money. I didn't need it," police quoted Mrs. Fordham as saying.

In her confession, she said she took a key from Miss Hawkins two months ago when the 73-year-old spinster came to the vault and

NEW YORK (UPI)—A threat of a mass transit strike at midnight Sunday that would paralyze public transportation in New York City was averted Thursday night when settlement was reached on a new contract.

The settlement was reached between the Transport Workers Union and the New York City Transit Authority.

Robert Kennedy Hails Gains In Rights, Lauds Local Help

By MERRIMAN SMITH

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—The Kennedy administration Thursday night reported "important progress" in civil rights during 1961 and gave a major share of credit to local and state officials, particularly for preventing violence in school desegregation cases.

In a year-end report to his brother, the President, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy voiced confidence "that this year's progress will continue, and that it will be carried forward with the effort and approval of the vast majority of the American people."

"I can report to you that the law enforcement officers and civil leaders in the vast majority of communities have met their obligations," the attorney general said.

His report on Justice department activities in the civil rights field placed heavy stress on local and state action, indicating the administration would not press for new federal civil rights legislation in the 1962 session of Congress.

The attorney general said 1961's experience strengthened his belief that Americans "are law-abiding people who wish to live by the law, do not want to circumvent court decisions, and are opposed to actions which will result in violence."

While hailing local-state cooperation, which he said the Justice department had striven to obtain without fanfare, Kennedy also pointed to increased action by his own department to assure equal rights for Negroes in voting, employment, transportation, schools and other areas.

"To help insure peaceful desegregation under law, in a manner which will reflect credit on the nation as well as the communities affected, we have increased very substantially our

Kennedy Asks U.S. to Buy Half Of U.N. Bonds

By RICHARD E. MOONEY

(Copyright 1961 by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—President John F. Kennedy will ask Congress next month to authorize purchase of up to one-half of the U.N. bond issue of $200 million.

The bond issue, voted by the General Assembly last week, is designed to rescue the U.N. from the financial straits created by the refusal of the Soviet Union and other members to pay for the organization's military operations in the Congo and the Gaza Strip. The U.N. deficit of more than $100 million will be $170 million by midyear if the non-contributors continue to hold out.

The administration views the financial crisis as a Soviet effort "to starve the United Nations into submission," Harlan Cleveland, Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, said Thursday. He spoke at a news conference to announce the President's plans for the bond issue.

Congress will probably debate the whole issue of U.S. relations to the U.N. reflecting particularly the bitterness that has been aroused by the U.N. action against the Congo's Katanga Province. It is unlikely that the legislation will be passed quickly.

Cleveland anticipated the debate in a statement describing the need for the bond issue and for the U.N. itself.

"That the U.N.'s actions and the U.S. relationship to the United Nations are an American national issue, worthy of front-page controversy and public statements by practicing political leaders, simply means that the United Nations is doing things that are important enough for us to argue about among ourselves," he said.

"Far from dying," he continued, "the United Nations is increasingly being recognized as a significant mechanism of international politics—one of the most important arenas for the exercise of national power."

"Because the United Nations, in particular its peace-and-security operations, has been effective, the Communist bloc has sought to control or destroy it," Cleveland said. The Communists did this first by "misuse of the veto," then by trying to set up a "Troika" or "three-headed monster" in place of the secretary general, and now by undermining the organization's finances.

Several senators have said that they think there should be a close examination of the United Nations before a bond purchase is approved. Some have implied disapproval, but only one—Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va.—has said it in so many words. Several Democratic leaders in the Senate have endorsed it.

Cleveland said the bond issue would not "bail out" the non-paying members, who will still owe their dues. The bond issue would solve the U.N.'s cash problem "for this year and next," he said, and would provide a reserve for future emergencies.

The undersecretary said that the bonds are to be paid off out of the regular U.N. budget, which means that all members will help repay.

The bonds can be sold to non-members of the United Nations. This means that West Germany and Switzerland may participate, as well as non-profit institutions or private foundations. Some member countries, notably the Soviet Union and France, probably will not purchase from the issue because of their disagreement with U.N. policies.

The bonds will pay 2 per cent interest and mature in 25 years. They may be purchased only with convertible currencies—dollars, pounds, francs, marks and others—freely usable in all parts of the world.

The United States is financing about one-third of the U.N.'s budget of $73 million budget for ordinary operations this year, and about one-quarter of its $65 million budget for specialized agency work in food and agriculture, health, education and other fields. Both sums are formal assessments.

The United States also is making a voluntary contribution equal to about one-half of the $160 million expenses of nonassessment programs—technical assistance, Palestine refugees, malaria eradication, the children's fund and others.

The United States is paying almost $8 million of the $19 million it costs to keep 5,100 U.N. troops in the Gaza Strip, and has paid about $57 million of the $120 million that the Congo operations have cost in the past year—both by special assessment.

UN Swedes Kill 2 Katangese

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, The Congo (UPI)—At least two Katangese gendarmes were killed and another was wounded Thursday when fighting broke out between Katangese forces and Swedish troops of the United Nations.

A Swedish U.N. officer said there were no U.N. casualties. The fighting broke an uneasy calm which has prevailed in the city under the tacit hold-fire agreement between U.N. and Katangese forces.

It was the third and most serious incident between Katangese forces and Swedish soldiers in two days. The United Nations confirmed a Swedish patrol had arrested Katangese Justice Minister Valentin Ilunga "by mistake" and promptly released him. Wednesday, four Swedish troops were arrested by the Katangese.

U.S. Sues to Void Vote Test in Dixie

By GERALD MOSES

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—The U.S. Justice department Thursday sued the State of Louisiana in federal court to try to smash a registration test for voters on grounds it deprives Negroes of the vote.

The suit, filed by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, named as defendants the state, Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, Lt. Gov. G. C. Aycock and State House Speaker J. Thomas Jewell, all members of the State Board of Registration which administers voting in Louisiana. Also named was registrar director Hugh E. Cutler Jr.

ASKS 3-JUDGE COURT

Kennedy asked that a 3-judge federal court be convened in New Orleans to declare unconstitutional a requirement that Louisiana voters be able to interpret sections of the state constitution.

The suit also asked that state officials be forbidden from enforcing the test.

The law is incorporated in the state constitution. It requires a would-be voter to answer questions put to him by a local registrar on any section of the state constitution. The document is 300 pages long.

In Baton Rouge, the state capital, Gov. Davis denied that the law allows the state to discriminate against Negro voter applicants.

GOV. DAVIS COMMENTS

"... I am of the firm opinion that such requirements should apply to all alike, without discrimination," he said. "This has been the policy of the state, and will continue to be the policy of the state as long as I am governor."

"Just recently, in New York," Mr. Davis added, "a 3-judge federal court upheld the right of the State of New York to require a registrant to speak the English language. This, certainly, is right, if handled without discrimination. The constitution of Louisiana requires no more, no less."

The suit was the first challenge of the validity of a state voting law to be filed by the Justice department. Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Mississippi also have literacy tests for voters.

"Interpretation of certain provisions of the Louisiana Constitution has differed widely even among those learned in the law," the government's suit said.

India Had No Choice, Nehru Says

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru said Thursday he is distressed that some Western nations opposed India's action in seizing Goa and two other Portuguese territories by force, but declared, "We had no choice."

"I don't like this division of opinion or, to put it crudely, white against black, but there it is—it is a bad sign," Nehru told a news conference.

He said he probably would now be called a hypocrite, but his New Year's message to the world is "Work for peace."

BANGS FIST

Banging his fist on his desk with an unusual show of vehemence, the prime minister rejected a suggestion that India might now withdraw from the former Portuguese territories.

"There would be hell in the world if this happened, not just in India, but in the world," he declared without elaboration.

As to India's other territorial dispute, Nehru declined to give a definite answer whether he would demand that the Red Chinese evacuate 12,000 of the 42,000 square miles they have occupied on the Himalayan border.

DISCLOSES DECISION

But he disclosed that a treaty of trade and friendship with Red China is being allowed to lapse next April.

The Indian leader disclosed that D-Day for the invasion of Goa, which finally came on Dec. 17, was postponed twice because of pressure by the United States and Britain for a peaceful settlement. But the Portuguese rebuffed one American suggestion, Nehru said, and a second suggestion came too late—only three hours before Indian troops struck.

Caroline Tiptoes In to See Her Stricken Grandfather

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Clutching the hand of her mother, Caroline Kennedy tiptoed Thursday into the sick room of her grandfather.

The administrator of St. Mary's Hospital, Mother Josephine Marie, said the 4-year-old blonde charmer spent only a couple of minutes in the room where Joseph P. Kennedy, 73, lies seriously ill.

The usual hospital rule against child visitors obviously had been waived to allow Caroline a glimpse of her grandfather.

Ann Gargan, a niece of the elder Kennedy, told reporters he recognized Caroline but was unable to speak to her.

Asked about Kennedy's condition, Miss Gargan said: "He's getting along. He is not yet able to speak. We are hopeful."

Caroline and her mother, Jacqueline Ken-nedly, slipped into the hospital through a side door, unseen by about 50 waiting tourists or by newsmen and photographers.

They remained in the hospital building for about 45 minutes. Except for her brief visit to her grandfather, Caroline spent the rest of the time in one of several rooms reserved for the Kennedy family across the corridor.

President John F. Kennedy, again driving his own open convertible with a Secret Service agent as a passenger, arrived while Mrs. Kennedy and their daughter were still at the hospital.

The President entered through the hospital lobby.

Father, mother and Caroline all left by a side door for the return trip to the mansion where they are spending the holidays.

The elder Kennedy suffered a stroke Dec. 19.

Kennedy, Freeman End Work On New-Look Farm Program

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—President John F. Kennedy and Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman finished work Thursday night on what the chief executive described as a "new agricultural program for the 1960s."

Kennedy met with Freeman and other top advisers for 2½ hours at his borrowed ocean-front mansion to nail down the administration's farm proposals.

Freeman said details would be withheld at this time, but prior to the session he told newsmen he was hoping to produce "a fresh new agricultural policy."

Earlier the President and Mrs. Kennedy accompanied their four-year-old daughter Caroline on a brief visit to the hospital bedside of her ailing grandfather. (See story above.)

It was during a picture-taking session after the evening meeting in the vast living room of his vacation residence here that Kennedy told cameramen: "The caption for this will be: 'We have completed our program for agriculture for 1962!'"

He later added that he and his aides had "completed work on a new agricultural program for the 1960s." But neither the President nor Freeman amplified, apparently saving the details for a message to Congress next year.

Freeman told reporters upon arrival at Palm Beach International Airport that there was a possibility Kennedy would send a special farm message to Congress.

The chief executive has been working here with aides on the State-of-the-Union Message since Tuesday. He also was described as concentrating Thursday on the economic report he must send to Congress shortly after it reconvenes in January.

They met in an informal setting with the President using one of his famous rocking chairs and the others located on a sofa and chairs around a coffee table on which charts, reports, and other documents were strewn.

As Kennedy ushered the news contingent into the room, his 1-year-old son, John Jr., uttered some sounds and waved from behind a screen door on the side.

Meeting with the President and Freeman were Charles Murphy, undersecretary of agriculture; Theodore C. Sorensen, the President's special counsel; Myer Feldman, Sorensen's deputy and a White House specialist on farm matters; Lawrence F. O'Brien, special assistant for congressional relations; David Bell, Budget Bureau director, and Dr. Walter Heller, chairman of the council of economic advisers.

Ald. White On the Job For 39 Years

By HERMAN HANCOCK

Fifth Ward Alderman John A. White will begin his 40th consecutive year as a member of the city's governing body at the re-organizational meeting next Tuesday.

In January, 1922, White first took the oath of office. He has been a member of the city's legislative body since.

During his 39-year tenure, which is said to be the longest continuous service in American municipal history, White has served on every standing committee of Atlanta government.

At present he is chairman of the important finance committee, a post he also held under former Mayor Roy LeCraw.

He has served as a member of the budget commission since it was created in 1937. Important committees which he has headed or served on include public works, parks, building, tax and half a score of others.

White was an Army lieutenant in World War I, serving in France and in occupied Germany.

He married the former Miss LeNore Pearson of Atlanta. They have a daughter, Mrs. J. O. Bowen Jr.

The Whites date on their four grandchildren, James, 9; Veronica, 7; Eileen, 5, and Allison, 3.

"I appreciate the privilege of having been a part of a growing, developing Atlanta," White said. "I shall continue to give honest, fair, and efficient service in the future. I have had a rare experience and am thankful to the voters of our city."

Stolen Car Rams Pole in Wild Chase

Two brothers were injured Thursday night after a stolen auto slammed into a metal utility pole during a 90-mile-per-hour auto chase, police said.

Freddy Perry, 19, was wounded in the hip when he attempted to flee on foot from the wreck scene at Gordon and West Whitehall Streets, SW. Patrolmen H. L. Valentine and M. D. Kennedy said.

His brother, Eddy Perry, 17, suffered head injuries when he struck the windshield.

Patrolmen said the Perrys, Negroes who reside at 197 Flat Shoals Ave., SE, were treated at Grady Hospital and would be held for suspicion of auto larceny.

En route to investigate an alarm ringing at the Connally Street School, Kennedy and Valentine said they saw the auto which had been reported stolen and gave chase.

They said the driver lost control at Gordon and West Whitehall and struck the post, then both jumped out and ran. The officers said they opened fire, wounded one and chased the other down.

The Explorer Scouts program of the Atlanta Area Council, Inc., has grown to 2,443 Explorers in 158 units.

"Exploring," the high school-age program of the Boy Scouts, is getting an increasingly closer look from business and industry on the value of sponsoring a unit.

Each of the 158 units is sponsored by a business, industry, professional group, church, synagogue, service club, fraternal club, civic club or interested group of citizens.

O. B. Gorman, scout executive of the Atlanta Area Council, said industry "has found opportunities to assist the young men of the community with a program of activities that relate to their own field — and a fine service outlet for the company."

Fulton Lovell, state game and fish commission director, announced Thursday he will recommend immediate action at the January session of the council.

The council is a state agency created by a 1957 law to review complaints of stream pollution.

It is armed with injunctive powers, which can be employed in cases where streams are polluted by operations of commercial firms. However, the council will face a more thorny problem in dealing with the Withlacoochee.

Recent tests by health department agents along the river show oxygen content is considerably lower at the point of sewage disposal from Valdosta.

State biologists reported fish were killed by oxygen depletion in the river.

City Manager Harold Farmer of Valdosta said the city sewage plant is disposing of about 80 per cent more waste material than its capacity. He explained that the city knows of the problem but has no money to finance plant expansion.

Peerless Mills Puts Off Closing

ROSSVILLE—The big Peerless Woolen Mills here will not close Dec. 31 as previously announced.

Instead, personnel director Walter Murray said Thursday, the last employee will be laid off in about six weeks. About 400 workers are still on the payroll.

Morgan Gress Dies; Father Gave Cyclorama

Morgan V. Gress, retired lumber executive, son of the late G. V. Gress who presented Atlanta with the famed painting at the Cyclorama and the Grant Park Zoo, died Thursday in a Jacksonville, Fla., private hospital.

Mr. Gress, 88, was a native of Jesup. He moved to Jacksonville in 1900. Active in many civic enterprises, he was one of the founders of the Community Chest. He was an organizer of the Timuquana Country Club in Jacksonville.

Survivors include his wife, the former Eugenia Stephens of Atlanta; two daughters, Mrs. Alia Marshall and Mrs. Gretchen LeMarte, both of Jacksonville, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. David Crockett, Atlanta.

Riley A. Swicord Sr.

Funeral services for Riley A. Swicord Sr., 76, of 1322 E. Mercer Ave., East Point, will be at 2 p.m. Friday at Willingham Drive Baptist Church. The Rev. T. G. Hughes and the Rev. R. A. Reynolds will officiate. Burial will be in Shadnor Baptist churchyard, Union City.

Mr. Swicord died Wednesday in a private hospital.

Born in Decatur County, he had been an Atlanta resident since 1912. A member of the Carpenter's Local No. 225, Mr. Swicord was a retired contractor. He was a member of the Primitive Baptist Church and a Mason.

Survivors include his wife, the former Vela Vickery; a son, Riley A. Swicord Jr., Millington, Tenn.; three daughters, Mrs. H. T. Truitt, Mrs. Robert E. Eubanks and Mrs. W. D. Lee, all of East Point; a brother, Henry G. Swicord, Climax, and three sisters, Mrs. Emily Harrell, Climax; Mrs. Ada Wilcox, Tallahassee, Fla.; and Mrs. Rosa Adams, Panama, Fla.

Stamp Honors Nurses

WASHINGTON—Postmaster Gen. J. Edward Day presents an album to Mother M. Rose Elizabeth during ceremonies Thursday honoring the nursing profession with the issuance of a special 4-cent stamp. Mother Elizabeth is a former mother general of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, a Roman Catholic organization which 100 years ago provided 80 sisters to serve as Union Army nurses in the Civil War. Fowler B. McConnell Dies; Sears Executive Fowler B. McConnell, 67, retired chairman of the board of Sears Roebuck and Co. and one-time head of Sears southern retail operations with headquarters in Atlanta, died Wednesday in Chicago following several months' illness.

A 44-year veteran with the giant merchandising company, McConnell was president from 1946 to 1958 and chairman from 1958 until his retirement in May 1960. He guided the company through an expansion program during which sales quadrupled, from $1 billion to $4 billion in his last year as chairman.

McConnell was born in Upper Sandusky, Ohio, and was a fast-charging linemen on the University of Chicago football team during the regime of Amos A. Stagg as coach. He was a first baseman and 300 hitter on the Maroon baseball team.

After his graduation in 1916, he served on the Mexican border with the First Illinois Cavalry. When he returned to Chicago it was too late to enroll in the fall term of law school so he found a job with Sears in the stockroom of the Chicago mail order plant.

During World War I McConnell served in France as an infantry captain. On his return to Sears in 1919 he became assistant shoe buyer. In 1930 he was named Why Have To Run to the Legislature For Permission To Open an Alley?

Enactment of home rule legislation is a sure way to cut out a lot of wasted motion in the General Assembly and to reduce the mountain of work annually facing the state office which is called upon to draw up 95 per cent of all bills, resolutions and amendments introduced.

It doesn't make sense for a town to have to run to the legislature for permission to take actions ranging from opening or closing an alley to revising its charter. Strictly local affairs comprise approximately two-thirds of the staggering number of bills and resolutions introduced in the legislature each year.

Legislative courtesy prevails on such matters and no one gives a hoot about them except the sponsor of the measure and his county constituents.

The latter should have more of a hand in dealing with their own problems instead of dumping so many of them into the lap of the General Assembly which understandably yawns while going through the motions of acting on trivia.

Two Bills Could Help Lunchrooms

Several pieces of legislation are being proposed to help Georgia's school lunchrooms, and they deserve solid backing from the legislature.

One would permit the use of tax funds for the school lunch program. The other would exempt school lunchrooms from milk price controls.

The first bill is among 10 being urged by the State Board of Education. As it stands now, tax funds cannot be used for school lunchroom overhead and equipment (with the exception of basic lunchroom equipment installed in schools constructed under the state school building program). This means that each lunchroom must buy its own equipment and pay its own overhead, either from money collected from pupils or from money donated by outside groups, such as civic clubs or churches.

The result, of course, is that some schools have well-furnished lunchrooms while others, particularly in the poorer communities, don't.

The lunchroom is as much a part of the modern school as the auditorium, the gymnasium, and the classrooms themselves. It makes sense, therefore, to incorporate the lunchrooms in the regular, tax-supported school program.

This would not, incidentally, include the cost of the food itself. The cost of the food would continue to be paid by the pupils and by allotments from the federal government.

The bill to exempt school lunchrooms from fixed prices on milk is recommended by the Georgia School Boards Association. There have been estimates that this legislation would reduce the cost of a half-pint of milk a cent or two.

With nearly 53 per cent of Georgia's school children depending on the school lunchrooms for their noon meal, it is important to keep the price of the meal as low as possible. The school lunch is the only balanced meal many children get.

Some school lunchrooms are in a financial strain now to hold down the price of the meals. The legislature can lend a hand by passing these two pieces of legislation.

Opposition Welcomed To Rep. James C. Davis

It has been obvious for quite some time that Rep. James C. Davis would have opposition for reelection next year. On many issues Mr. Davis has been at odds with the best interests of his constituents in the Fifth District urban complex. His opposition to most phases of the Kennedy program, despite his nominal allegiance to the Democratic Party, is a matter of record.

The first candidate to announce against Rep. Davis is Charles L. Weltner, 34-year-old Atlanta attorney. Active in many civic causes, Mr. Weltner knows Atlanta and the district. We need active participation and interest by young men of such calibre in politics and welcome him as a candidate.

India's Example Gets Others Into the Act

Learning through intelligence sources that Iraq was planning to take a leaf from Nehru's book and seize the neighboring oil rich sheikdom of Kuwait, Great Britain has sent large naval and air reinforcements into the area.

Strenuous efforts are being made to bring about a diplomatic settlement of the Indonesian-Dutch dispute over West Guinea. The Indonesian government has served notice it will take action similar to that India took in Goa.

Nehru's action in Goa was most reprehensible for the example it set. If every nation which has a territorial dispute or ambitions against its neighbor chooses the route of force, patient efforts to settle international quarrels through negotiations have been wasted motion.

Labor, Management Cool to Kennedy Plea

President Kennedy and Secretary of Labor Goldberg have urged the AFL-CIO and the National Association of Manufacturers to adopt a policy of gearing overall wage increases to productivity. Neither apparently are willing to adopt such a doctrine although it seems to us to be economically sound.

In a completely free economy, wage increases automatically would be determined by gains in productivity. But labor and management through their bargaining methods, with the help of government agencies and various controls favoring both, have evaded some normal competitive forces.

Administration pressure is designed to bring about voluntary restraints to prevent direct government action to control inflation. Arguments against it are for a continuation of policies that might make such direct action inevitable.

Close-up

All This Reconstruction Without Plan?

Preparations for demolition of a central Atlanta landmark, the old Ivan Allen-Marshall building at the corner of Marietta and Forsyth, signals a new year of further changes in the face of downtown Atlanta. Replacing it will be another multi-story office building as the city's downtown building boom continues into the New Year.

Just how rapid the changes are coming is underscored by the annual report by President Jack Adair of the Central Atlanta Association released yesterday. He lists almost two score major building projects completed, partially completed or planned in 1961. He points to exciting prospects ahead, progress being made in traffic and parking and in urban renewal.

Urban renewal involves much more than the projects undertaken by the city under the federal-aid program and the slum sections cleared for expressway construction. Razing old buildings now occupying valuable land space for new skyscrapers by private interests is fully as important in rejuvenating the heart of the metropolitan area.

Mr. Adair points up a deficiency in these developments, however, that certainly can stand correction. There is no "up-to-date, inclusive, comprehensive plan," for redevelopment of central Atlanta. In cooperation with the City Planning Department, the association has undertaken a detailed study or "inventory" of 78 blocks in the core area. It will give a complete inventory of each block and how the space is being used. While it will not be as comprehensive as the association would like, it can at least form the basis for planning orderly redevelopment in order to avoid costly mistakes that would have to be corrected later.

Even without comprehensive planning, rehabilitation has been proceeding at a tremendous pace. It seems incredible that the second reconstruction of Atlanta goes forward without an overall, up-to-date plan.

There is, for instance, no coordinated planning to make the central area more attractive as a place for people to live and work. Taking note of this, the Georgia chapter of the American Institute of Architects has repeatedly urged that beauty not be lost sight of in planning. They have now been joined by the Atlanta-Fulton County Joint Planning Board, which has urged that the Atlanta Planning Department include in any master plan the promotion of harmony and beauty in the city's appearance.

To accomplish this the board urges the combined effort of architects, planners, builders and owners of realty. It recommends further that the city make a visual survey and create a municipal design plan and program as part of a master plan.

All this seems to be in line with Mr. Adair's report citing the lack of a detailed plan for downtown redevelopment. This lack of planning could easily result in promoting new blight tomorrow.—GEORGE BOSWELL.

Breaking Bread In Atlanta...

Dobrosav Tadic is a handsome research statistician from Belgrade. He lunched in Atlanta Thursday along with visitors from 18 other nations. The United States government—after a pointed delay—had just agreed to go ahead and sell $45 million worth of surplus wheat and edible oils to Tito's Yugoslavia.

So we asked Mr. Tadic some questions. President Kennedy had to ask himself some of the same thorny questions before deciding to continue the Eisenhower policy of aiding Tito's Communist government.

After all, should the United States help a fellow who had arrogantly defended Russia's resumption of nuclear tests?

Certainly it was time for the United States to quit supplying military hardware to such a country until it indicated more clearly whom it intended to shoot.

The President and Secretary of State Rusk reviewed the food aid program also. During the review, American displeasure was made pointedly clear to Tito.

The Rusk rule of qualification which emerged from the review was: Is the nation receiving our food aid sovereign and independent? Does it make its own foreign policy instead of following Moscow? Yugoslavia qualified there, even though its policy had angered us. But obviously the unspoken and overriding consideration was more practical: Would food aid to Tito strengthen or divide over-all Communist power?

The decision was made that it would be divisive insofar as it kept Yugoslavia from having to turn again to Moscow and ask for food. And at a time when cracks are showing in Khrushchev's bloc control, American wheat will be invested to make Tito's independence of Moscow possible.

The misgivings that surround the decision are obvious. The decision is likely to be attacked. But the attacker must be asked to answer the one central question: Would he be willing to force a nation that has broken away from Moscow to diminish its independence now and go back to the Kremlin for bread, thus unifying communism at a time when Khrushchev is beset by disunity?

"Mr. Tadic," we asked the visitor to Atlanta, "do the Yugoslav people truly wish to be independent of Russia, and will this food aid help you toward that end?"

"Yes," he said. "We are a proud people. We began by trying the Russian system. We didn't like it. We remember that the American people were then the first to help us achieve our independence. We need to trade with you if we are to stay independent."

"Are the Yugoslav people told clearly where the American food comes from?"

"Yes," he said. "Our press does make it clear. And I only wish the American people knew the very deep appreciation my people feel. We don't trust Tito. But bread reaches his people."

Only One Opinion Heard on Nehru

WASHINGTON—I don't know who Mr. John Franklin of Atlanta is. But there is something remarkable about him. He is the only American (out of 185 million) who thinks that Nehru was right in invading Goa. At least, he is the only American I know of who has said so publicly.

Mr. Franklin, you will recall, wrote in the Pulse of the Public last Tuesday that Nehru's "action was rooted in the American Declaration of Independence."

This is strange. Not what he said but the fact that so few Americans are on his side. This is a big country with many opinions. Yet only one opinion has been heard since Nehru sent his armies into Goa.

As far as I know, no newspaper took Nehru's side. Letters-to-the-editor columns in all three Washington papers were unanimously critical of Nehru. Politicians all greeted the invasion with outrage.

Nobody, except Mr. Franklin, likes Mr. Nehru anymore.

Yet America usually provides two opinions on everything. And I mean everything.

Item. The 1961 World Series. Millions of Americans bet on Cincinnati.

Item. The 1956 Georgia senatorial Democratic primary. Thousands of Georgians voted for M. E. Thompson.

Item. Pearl Harbor. Some Americans blamed it on the Japanese. Some blamed it on FDR.

Item. Chief Justice Earl Warren. Some Birchers think he ought to be lynched.

Item. The 1962 Georgia governor's race. Some people think Garland Byrd would make a worse governor than Marvin Griffin. Some think Griffin would make a worse governor than Byrd.

The list could go on and on. Americans just disagree. But they don't disagree on Nehru.

It is no mean distinction to be the unum when the pluribus totals 185,000,000. I take off my hat to Mr. Franklin. He should enjoy his majestic loneliness while he can, however. Who knows—maybe Nehru will invade Red China tomorrow and poor Mr. Franklin will be just one member of a great big crowd shouting "hurray for good old Pandit!"

Russian Church Joins the Council

NEW DELHI—A much-discussed event of the meeting of the World Council of Churches was the reception of the Russian Orthodox Church into Council membership. As was to be expected, comments ran all the way from "thank God" to "they are secret agents of the Communist Party."

On the day the admission of the Russian Orthodox Church was to be voted on, pickets appeared on the street in front of the meeting hall. They carried placards which read, "Servants of 'K' not servants of God." The pickets handed out literature which charged the Russian church with being spies of the Soviet Union. The question of freedom from intervention in church affairs by the Soviet government was brought out in a press conference with Archbishop Nikodim Rostov, head of the office of Foreign Church Relations of the Moscow Patriarchate.

The archbishop is 32 years of age and an extremely tall, dark and handsome man. He stated with feeling that the constitution of Russia separated church and state, and gave to citizens of the Soviet Union confessional freedom. "We can say that the church is completely independent from state interference," Nikodim said. "We in the church are all independent in our inner life. We now enter the World Council of Churches with the sincere desire and intention to participate in its activities, especially those concerned with Faith and Order." (Faith and Order deals with doctrinal and organizational differences between the churches.)

"Those who speak about the subversive role of the church in Russia are either uninformed, or else they know the facts and do not speak the truth. The determining factor of the Russian Church is, and always has been, the Gospel."

(Dr. Gibson, pastor of Morningside Presbyterian Church here, attended the Third General Assembly of the World Council of Churches in New Delhi.)

There were varying opinions about the effect of the Russian reception into the Council. One man remarked, "The same roads brought the Goths and the Christian Gospel to Rome." The exchange of ideas is always a two-way street. Many said that if we believe in the power of the Gospel, we ought to rejoice in this newly opened road between the Christians in the Soviet Union and the rest of the world. The church is not a political entity, and does not divide people into political groups. There are people who always want to build a wall and stay behind it. The early church did this at first, but Paul broke out of the wall and found the world outside. We are spending millions on the "Voice of America." Here is an opportunity to confer with the Christian leaders of Russia in an atmosphere of Christian unity.

Most people here believed the Russian churchmen are prompted by sincere motives. Tensions between governments often create problems for the church. This is as true of Russians as it is of Americans.

Goldwater-Scrooge-Nixon-Mugwump Bloc Is Suggested for 'Maverick' Democrats

Waycross—I cannot help but be contemptuous and distrustful of so-called "conservative" Democrats in Georgia and other Southern states who run on the Democratic ticket, with all the prestige and power of that great party in this region accruing to their political gain, and then when they get in office voting down the line with mossy-backed Republicans, turning their backs on every liberal aspect of the Democratic Party. These mavericks who run on the Democratic ticket and then vote the Republicans when they vote are political half-breeds, ingrates and turncoats.

Let the conservative Democrats who vote down the line against aid to education, medical aid for the aged, aid to depressed areas and all the other basic, severe social needs of a not altogether affluent society in this threshold era, run on the Republican ticket here in the South and see how far they get. Not one in Georgia or a sister state could get elected to dog-catcher. But they run on the Democratic ticket and then knife the party leadership in the back with deceit and abandon ship when they are needed most.

Inasmuch as they are not really Democrats at all and they are also not identifiable as Republicans, they need a readily seen label so everyone will know what they are. I respectfully submit the following name: the Goldwater-Scrooge-Nixon-Mugwump Party. Then all the scoundrels will be under one heading and you will still have nothing but a mess of pottage.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, of gracious memory, would blister them with his famous eloquence and banish them with scorn and derision.

COOPER SMITH.

So 'Let's Have A Few Skeptics'

Atlanta—Ages ago it was held by a great philosopher that the individual man is the measure of the universe and the true nature of things cannot be comprehended, because reality is independent of the mind and therefore impossible of attainment.

From the fourth century during the reign of the first Christian Emperor Constantine, who incidentally had his wife boiled to death in a vat of scalding water, and his innocent son executed, until the 16th century the governments and the chancelleries of Europe were controlled by the churches. This period lasted for about 1,200 years, during which time all independent thought was suppressed by the noble churchmen, and no advancement was made for the benefit of mankind. Nothing transpired except fratricidal religious wars.

Then in the 16th century a few brave men such as Galileo, Copernicus, Kepler and Bruno, came out of the dark cave of conformity, as envisioned by Plato, 1,800 years before, and into the world of living nature and the splendor of the sun. These skeptics did not claim to know reality, but worked with the limitations of their own minds and lit the torches which have lighted the way for other great minds from Newton to Einstein.

If there is to be extra curricular reading in our schools, let's have a few skeptics on the list of readers, because in this critical age we have no time for more conformity.

Suggestion Made

For Teachers' Reply

Young Harris, Ga.—A teacher wrote some time ago to The Constitution, declaring that teachers need help in their "stupendous" task of dealing with the integration crisis in the classrooms.

Let me offer help for the instance which you presented. You asked, "What can you say when a child blurts out, 'But, teacher, Daddy says the governor won't speak to an integrated group!'"

You could reply, "Maybe the governor does not know the best thing to say to an integrated group. It isn't simple. In that case, he should not speak to them. Let's see what sort of speech you can write showing what he ought to have said to them. Each one of you write one and hand it in next Monday morning, 100 words or more, pretending you are the governor. Get your parents to help you, but put it down in your own words."

In a school where integration is operating or being discussed, many incidents need to be dealt with by the teacher, promptly and expertly. It can be done only if the teacher has a sound philosophy of race relations, fundamental ideas and principles which will apply like a medicine and without irritation.

Invasion of Goa Was Inconsistent

Every one-worler in the United States should have gasped with astonishment on reading the headlines on Dec. 18. The invasion of Portuguese Goa by troops of India is an action so completely inconsistent with all we have been taught to believe about Premier Nehru. It was India, the great neutralist, who urged that all nations abandon force of arms as an instrument of national aspiration. It was India who refused to express any great indignation over Khrushchev's resumption of atomic testing.

A dozen American voices have echoed the neutralist pacifist line peddled around the world by Nehru. And these voices have been raised in strident accusation against those in this country who have timidly suggested that freedom is worth fighting for.

In the dispatches I read, it was suggested that India's action against Goa was heartily approved by Communist Russia. This is not at all surprising since Russia, while condemning colonialism, has become in this century the greatest colonial power on earth.

It is also interesting to note that India was too noble to go to arms to repel an invasion by the Red Chinese. And in this instance insisted on negotiation and settlement at a conference table. But Portuguese Goa, which offered little chance of resistance, constitutes such a great threat to India that armed invasion is justified.

It would, I suggest, be inter-

They Came Back in and Saw
Four Stockings on the Mantel

We were just sitting there in the candlelight, on Christmas Eve, looking at the mantelpiece. It looked kind of empty. All the years up to now, four stockings had hung there this time of night, bulging with the little knick-knacks you put in kids' stockings. Now there were only two. And in a few more years there'd be only one, and then none. And only the little pin holes in the mantel piece where the tacks had been stuck in, for 20-odd years, would be there to remind us of Christmases gone by.

"Well," I said, "that's the way it has to be. You born 'em, and you have 'em around for awhile, and then they grow up and they have to go on, and there's no use feeling blue about it. She's hanging up her stocking about now, I guess, out in Arizona, feeling sort of teary on her first Christmas Eve away from home. But feeling grown up, too, hanging her first stocking for the first Christmas in her own house. So she'll be happy.

"I don't know whether they hang any stockings around an Army barracks or not. I doubt it. But they'll probably dress some fat cook up in a Santa Claus suit, and he'll pass out cigars, and a few cans of beer. And there'll be somebody there with a guitar, and they'll sit around on their bunks and sing, and tell lies to each other about what they used to get for Christmas when they were at home. Ane he'll be a little lonesome for home, but not much, for his hard to be lonesome around a barracks, even on Christmas Eve."

She looked at the mantel. "It does look bare."

"It does indeed," I said.

"Then we got up and went out to the kitchen for something, and I thought I heard sniggering in the living room and somebody moving about."

And when we came back in, four stockings were hanging from the mantel, just as in days gone by. We just stood there staring and wondering.

Then they stuck their heads around the door. "They're yours," they said. "We filled 'em. Open 'em so we can open ours."

So we did, and there was some tobacco for me, and some handkerchiefs and perfume for her, and a little do-it-yourself cactus garden the older one had sent from Arizona.

In all the years we had been filling stockings, it was the first time anybody had ever filled one for us. And we just sat there, like kids on Christmas morning, feeling happy.

To Dig In or Not
Is the Question

Let's see: To dig the hole, to build forms and pour the concrete, then to reinforce the roof with sufficient strength to accomplish the purpose, to stock the enclosure with enough water, food, first-aid equipment, sanitary facilities, etc. would cost anywhere from $5,000 to $25,000, depending on size, location and "extras."

True, there are prefabricated fallout shelters which come cheaper, but they don't look too substantial to the untutored eye. To dig in or not to dig in—that's the question.

While readily admitting that there are many pros and cons on this subject, just for the record, let's consider an alternate use of the same money. Instead of burrowing in the ground as though we had no recourse but to crawl into a grave and cover ourselves up, just suppose the $7,500 recently spent by one of my friends on a fallout shelter had been given to send trained personnel to the troubled spots of the world. To Asia, Africa, Latin America, the Islands of the Seas where they would live among the people, speak their native tongue, help in their fields and factories, schools and homes.

There, they would teach sanitation and basic hygiene, better farming methods, peaceful ways of living with themselves and the rest of the world. And above all: obedience and love for Almighty God.

Just imagine what would happen. Well, I know already what has happened. The above process goes on every day among the missionaries sent out all over the world. But they are too few in number. Yet their influence is far beyond anything or any force represented by commerce, business or the many fads which come and go.

The Church of Jesus Christ has had its peace corps for centuries with trained representatives in every nation. Take just one man's life, for instance, Dr. Bill Wallace, an able physician, lived among the Chinese in their own country with revered status. The poor people dearly loved him. Seeing his standing with the people, the Communists made Bill Wallace their first target. After trumped up charges and false accusations, they condemned him to death. Dragged through the streets before the eyes of those whom he had healed and who loved him, he didn't mutter a profane word of dissent. He is dead now. But did they kill his influence? Not by a long shot. The name of Dr. William Wallace will rate a higher berth among the patient Chinese longer than the name of Mao Tse-tung.

Such a living, loving example among the races of men seems to be a much worthier repository of our monies than burrowing a hole in the ground—even if it saves our own skin!

Trainman, Can You Explain
How to Wear a Watch Chain?

If railroad engineers and conductors and Pullman porters are puzzled these days to see a tall, long-legged, redheaded youth lurking around depots and railroad yards peering at their paunches and midriffs I hope they won't sic the railroad detectives on him. That ain't no hobo, that's my son. And let no railroad man think that his intent study of an aging, bulging mid-section is critical. It's merely appraising.

You see, the young fellow is trying to find out how to wear his Christmas watch chain.

As far as I can make out my old-fashioned son is the only college-age youth in this world to crave a pocket watch instead of a wrist watch. A while back he bought himself an excellent time piece at a Decatur Street pawn shop and went around for days pulling it out with a flourish to tell us the time every minute or so. He was handicapped in this grand old gesture by the fact that he didn't have a proper watch chain. First he had a key chain, then a thong of leather and finally a shoe string, which he tied to his belt loop.

"I hope I get a watch chain for Christmas," he remarked pointedly on more than one occasion. And we all earnestly set about finding him his heart's desire.

It wasn't easy. No dime or drug store and few department stores stock the things. Jewelers had a small stock but they were either effete slender links of platinum or white gold or heavy gold chains big enough for a calf rope and costing heavily. We searched for some time before a friend of ours found a gold-filled chain exactly like his octogenarian grandfather once wore. I knew at once it was what my son dreamed of.

He got some other things for Christmas but none of them engrossed him so happily as that watch chain. He attached his watch to it, beaming at us all delightedly, and then the problem hit him. Where do you secure the other end of a watch chain?

"Son, you need a vest," his grandmother, Muv, told him. "A sweater's no use with a watch chain."

"That's right," he said, relieved, and rushed off, returning with a borrowed vest.

But after he tucked the watch in the vest pocket none of us was sure what to do with the rest of the chain. He favored stretching it across his flat middle and poking out his stomach so every one of the chain's glittering gold-filled links was visible.

"I wish I had an elk's tooth to wear with it," he remarked wistfully.

Somebody disappeared and dug up an old fraternity key. He attached that for a fob and we all stood around watching and making suggestions. The chain should run through a buttonhole but after that we didn't know where it went.

He thought of asking some of the neighbors and his sisters were horrified. "We haven't got any neighbors that old," one of them pointed out.

Then he remembered railroaders — the splendid, expansive gesture of a conductor pulling out his watch to tell you your train is "on time." "That's it," he cried, "that's where I'll find how to wear it!" And he was off to the train station — apparently the last stronghold of pocket watch masculinity.

Fisher Body Union
Approves Contract

Members of United Auto Workers Local 34 unanimously approved a strike settlement Thursday afternoon and will return to work Friday at General Motors' Fisher Body and Chevrolet plants here.

A GM spokesman said the 2,300 autoworkers would be called back at their regular shift times of 7:30 a.m. and 3:42 p.m. Friday.

He added it also was likely that employees would work overtime Saturday at the Fisher Body and Chevrolet plants which have been idle since Dec. 1.

The settlement was "ratified 100 per cent," said Leonard Hull, president of Local 34. "Everyone seemed well pleased with it."

No details of the agreement ending the 4-week-long dispute over production standards at Fisher Body were revealed.

E. H. Schaeffer, Fisher Body plant manager, estimated that GM lost some 11,000 units in production and the employees about $1,300,000 in wages during the strike.

Blast of Steel Drum
Shakes Plant Here

Fireworks tossed into a metal drum outside a dry cleaning plant Thursday triggered an explosion that rocked a section of northwest Atlanta, police said.

Det. Capt. R. E. Little said the 55-gallon drum on a lot at the Community Cleaners, 915 Hollywood Rd., contained refuse from the plant, including cleaning fluid.

Little said the blast damaged the plant as well as a residence at 11 Johnson Rd., N.W.

Plot to Kill 9 Laid to Youth

miles to the home of Jerry Fitzpatrick to obtain aid.

He was treated locally, then taken to Emory University Hospital where his condition was described as serious.

PUT IN LEG IRONS

"I was told Byrd lined them up and told them, 'I'm going to shoot you one, two, three,' and then started firing," Sheriff Wallace said.

He also said leg irons which had been placed on the boys when they first met Byrd and his companions were removed just before they got out of Byrd's car.

The sheriff said Flanagan told him he thought Byrd was joking when the leg irons were first placed on.

The scene of the killing was the front yard of a long-destroyed home. Located off Ga. 212, near the Smyrna campgrounds, the site is frequently used as a rendezvous by young couples.

Sheriff Wallace said Byrd's car skidded into a ditch as he was pulling away from the scene, bending a front bumper so that a tire later went flat.

GIVE STATEMENTS

"They were fixing the flat when we arrested them," Wallace said.

The trio was picked up on the basis of the description of Byrd's car given by Flanagan. "They all denied knowing anything at first," the sheriff said, but statements were later obtained.

Sheriff Wallace said the Hendersons and Flanagan were taken to the scene of the killing in leg irons—placed on them when they first entered Byrd's car at a drive-in theater near Conyers.

He said Flanagan and the Henderson brothers were invited into the car after the 15-year-old girl had identified them as former boy friends.

"After shooting the three boys, Charles Byrd told one of the arrested persons 'I've got six more friends to meet,'" Sheriff Wallace reported.

A 3-shot bolt-action shotgun was found hidden between mattresses in Byrd's home. Byrd in recent months had been acting as caretaker for Frank McCord, a railroad employee who spends much of his time in Washington.

Sheriff Wallace said he had received several complaints from neighbors about Byrd firing rifles and shotguns in the woods around

3 Parties Banned

PANGIM, Goa (AP)—The Indian military governor of the former Portuguese enclaves in India has banned the only three political parties which the Portuguese had allowed to exist in Goa, Damao and Diu.

India Broke Law Of UN, Say British

By DREW MIDDLETON

(Copyright 1961 by the New York Times Co.)

LONDON—Britain's foreign secretary accused India Thursday night of direct breach of charter of the United Nations and of international law.

The Indian invasion of Goa was cited by the Earl of Home as contributing to the "crisis of confidence" in the United Nations which now exists in the British government.

The major part of Lord Home's speech to the U.N. Association at Berwick-on-Tweed was devoted to detailed and forceful criticism. He appealed for a "determined effort" to "bring the United Nations back to working the charter as it was meant to be."

"Peace and security," he declared, "must be reinstated as its primary aims."

A week ago the foreign office let it be known that this speech would be of extraordinary importance. Home's words reflect the deep misgivings of British ministers, politicians and diplomats over present trends in the United Nations.

The first reason for lack of faith in the United Nations, Lord Home said, was that for the first time since its foundation "a number of countries have voted publicly and without shame in favor of the use of force to achieve national ends."

Four members of the Security Council, he pointed out, supported a resolution condoning the use of force by India against Goa. Had debate gone to the General Assembly, the foreign secretary asserted, many more delegations, "perhaps even a majority" would have voted similarly.

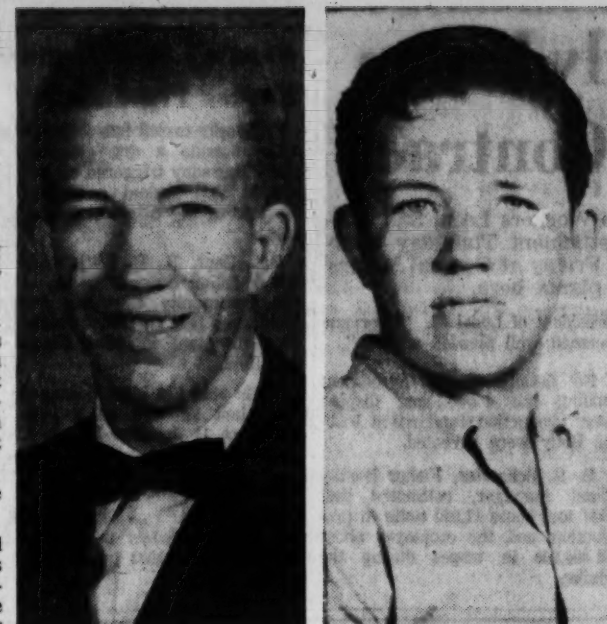

The significance, Lord Home said, is that "whatever the provocations suffered by India or her excuses made by her or for her, there is no doubt at all that her actions were a direct breach of McCord's place "but I could never get him to stop."

The dead boys' grandfather, R. W. Henderson, said his grandsons and the Flanagan boy had grown up together. "Those boys didn't even carry a pocket knife," Henderson said. "I don't know them ever to say a dirty word—least nobody never heard tell of it."

"Their momma and daddy are just wild," he added.

Sheriff Wallace said Byrd had lived at the Jolley Children's Home for several years before becoming McCord's caretaker. The 15-year-old boy in custody was living at the home at the time of the murders.

so he could tell me what had happened. He told me how the girl had called him earlier, and told him to meet her at a drive-in about eight miles from here.

He and the two boys that were killed were at the drive-in when the girl arrived with two other boys. They all left together and drove to a spot where an old house had been. (The place was about four miles from the Kirkpatrick home.)

After the shooting occurred, he managed to get away and ran to our house through a muddy swamp. He told me the girl's name and gave me a description of the car. This I later related to the sheriff.

The boy did not know that he was only about one half mile from where the boy charged with the slayings had been staying.

I was familiar with the car the boy had described, for it passed my house nearly every day.

He was worried about his buddies and kept saying, "They're probably dead by now for they threw them in the well." He remembered how he came to our house. Up the road and across two bridges; then I knew the exact spot where the shooting had occurred.

Collision Kills Driver; 31 Hurt

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—A chartered bus carrying workers to their homes collided with an auto Thursday and plunged down a 25-foot embankment, killing one man. The victim was Joseph McNamee, 23, of Pacific, Mo., driver of the auto.

The bus was carrying 31 persons. All were taken to a hospital and 10 remained for treatment. The passengers were employees of the McDonnell Aircraft Corp. They were en route to Franklin County.

The ambulance arrived about 15 minutes after we called, and took him to the hospital. With Sheriff Wallace's permission, I went with the sheriff to the well and also to arrest the two boys and the one girl.

The boys and the girl were only one half mile up the road changing a tire which had punctured on a bridge.

All of this gives Rockdale County a bad reflection. But none of the six involved were originally from Rockdale County.

and six other youths—all former acquaintances of the girl.

She said that Charles had never seen the Henderson boys or Flanagan before that night.

"We pulled up beside their car in the drive-in, Charles asked me who they was and I told him."

After viewing the movie, "Gidget Goes Hawaiian," the other boys were invited into the Byrd car, the leg irons attached and Charles drove to the scene of the slaying—about eight miles south of Conyers.

The girl, who spoke in a low voice, grew vague when asked about the actual shooting and gave only noncommittal answers to a reporter's questions.

With her red-dyed hair in disarray after a night in the jail, the girl (whose name cannot be published in accordance with Georgia juvenile law) commented: "I thought we were just going to the show."

ings as far south as the Everglades farming areas near Miami.

Lows ranging from 25 in north Florida to the low 40s in Miami and 55 in the Keys were forecast for Friday morning. Even lower temperatures were forecast for Saturday—from 24 to 28 in the Suwanee and Gainesville districts to the low 30s in the Everglades.

Storms piled heavy snow on Michigan and the Tennessee mountains and unrolled a new traffic-slowing blanket of white across New York and New England.

An arctic freeze kept the Middie West in a hoary grasp and reached icy fingers deep into Dixie.

A rash of deadly fires took a heavy toll of lives in the cold belt.

Ten inches of snow slugged high altitude areas of middle and eastern Tennessee. Eastern Kentucky measured 4 inches of new snow Thursday and expected 2 more inches by Friday.

Michigan's Leelanau County got 8 inches of snow, Holland residents waded through 7 inches and there was a 6-inch fall at Grand Haven.

The light, fluffy snow was swept into drifts that choked highways. Blowing snow halted visual flying in western Michigan.

Heavy, wet snow slugged most of New York State, part of New Jersey and shoved northeastward across New England areas still hobbled by remains of a Christmas storm. New York State counted two highway deaths attributed to ice and snow.

More than 2 inches of snow hit Canaan, Conn., and the snow kept coming. Heavy snow warnings were up for all of New England except Rhode Island, which was to have rain mixed with snow.

Accumulations of 4 to 8 inches were forecast in areas that received from 6 to 30 inches from the Christmas onslaught of winter.

The nation's coldest weather gripped Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois. The official national low was 18 below zero at Waukon, Iowa. Clintonville, Wis., and Bradford, Ill., were close behind with 17 below.

Britain Threatens Peace, Iraq Cries

(Copyright 1961 by the New York Times Co.)
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—Iraq protested to the Security Council Thursday against British moves in the Persian Gulf and charged that Britain's "gunboat policy" was threatening peace and Iraqi security.

The dispatch of British vessels, including a carrier, was announced in London Wednesday as an effort to forestall any attempt by Iraq to seize the sheikdom of Kuwait. Britain has a defense treaty with the small oil-rich state, which was given independent

Newspapers Raise Prices to 7c in Memphis

MEMPHIS (AP) — Both Memphis newspapers announced price changes Thursday which become effective with the New Year.

The Memphis Press-Scimitar and The Commercial Appeal will increase the price of week-day street sale editions to seven cents from the present rate of five cents.

The five-cent price had been in effect for week-day editions of the morning Commercial Appeal since 1888. The price for the Sunday edition remains 20 cents. The evening Memphis Press-Scimitar, which publishes week-days only, has been five cents since 1933.

Week-day home delivery price for both papers will be 35 cents. The present rate is 30 cents.

Laos' Chief Hints End to Deadlock

By RENE-GEORGES INAGAKI
VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Smiling and urbane, Prince Souvanna Phouma emerged from a round of behind-the-scenes talks Thursday to profess hope for a year-end break in the new deadlock on a Laotian coalition government.

"Let me work on this three or four days," Souvanna told newsmen who wondered how this revolt-prone, faction-ridden kingdom would get out of its latest jam. "Maybe you will have a nice surprise."

The implication was that the neutralist, Paris-educated former premier—named Oct. 8 to head a prospective regime of neutralists, rightists and leftists—expected a revival of the princely summit conference that collapsed after half an hour's angry exchange Wednesday.

If shooting is resumed in Laos, he warned, it will not be a simple civil war but a generalized East-West war. Rebel neutralist-Pathet Lao armed forces hold more than half of the jungle kingdom's 90,000 square miles.

Along similar lines, a visiting officer of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, Gen. Phoume Siprasouth, told reporters: "Nobody wants war. There cannot be war."

But if we are attacked we will fight."

Premier Prince Boun Oum, a Western-backed rightist, persisted in his refusal to dicker with Souvanna and the latter's half brother, Prince Souphanouvong of the Pathet Lao.

Boun Oum had denounced Souvanna as very un-neutral in their initial Vientiane meeting at the premier's residence. He said he wanted no part of a bargaining carnival over the allocation of Cabinet seats. Formation of the Cabinet is a disputed issue based on a proposed ratio in which neutralists would get half the 16 seats.

The royal government's position was that Souvanna, armed with King Savang Vathana's approval as premier-designate, should handle the job by consulting with the leaders of the various political elements here and not insist on the summit parley. Three politicians, in fact, did call briefly on

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Friday, December 29, 1961 9

Souvanna. One was ex-Premier Tiao Somsanth. But it was doubtful the short visits could be considered significant.

Boun Oum's right-hand man, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, picked up the ball. The deputy premier-defense minister visited both Souvanna and Souphanouvong and introduced them to have dinner with him to discuss coalition prospects.

"What internationally famous cinema-star is paying heavy sugar to an irate spouse who has proof of his shenanigans at Nice?"—Gossip-column quote.

Mixing business with pleasure . . . Can be done with some success . . . Furthermore, long hours of leisure . . . May not bring one happiness . . . And although we're not suggesting . . . What to do, in this regard . . . You can get as tired of resting . . . As you do when working hard.

On your annual vacation . . . In about a week or two . . . You have reached that situation . . . Where there's nothing else to do . . . You have had all you desired . . . In the way of rest and food . . . And, to tell the truth, you're tired . . . Of the pleasures you pursued.

And, we'll tell you, on the level . . . That, with all that time to spare . . . You are lucky if the devil . . . Doesn't find you napping there . . . With some sneaky proposition . . . That may catch you off your guard . . . Which a man in your position . . . Wouldn't have when working hard.

Pleasure always costs you double . . . Or, at best, the price is steep . . . But if you're in search of trouble . . . You can always get it, cheap.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	1♠	Pass
4♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The declarer went set today because he failed to take out a little extra protection against the malignant spirits that had stacked the cards so adversely.

The king of spades was opened against the four heart contract and declarer was quite complacent about it all. There was a chance that the queen of hearts would drop; if not, then declarer could afford to give up a club and a heart, for he would lose no more than one diamond trick, if East had either the king or the jack. In all his chances were better than three to one.

South therefore discarded a club on the ace of spades and led a diamond from dummy, finessing the ten. Upon winning with the jack, West got out with a high space. South ruffed, entered dummy with a club and tried another diamond finesse. When West took in the trick, the contract was doomed. That South had been a victim of hard luck cannot be denied.

But declarer had at his disposal a line of play which afforded him a better chance. On the ace of spades he should discard the ten of diamonds. He then leads a low club toward the queen in his own hand. If East should have the king of clubs the issue would be settled at once, for the queen of clubs would be declarer's 10th trick. If West wins the club trick as actually proved to be the case, he is helpless to make a damaging lead. If he returns a heart he will prevent the club ruff but will sacrifice his trump trick. If he returns a diamond it is into declarer's ace-queen. Any other return permits declarer to ruff a losing club in dummy with the singleton trump.

Sis! --- You Need Judo!

DEAR GEORGE: My girl has four brothers who are nutty about sports. Every time I go visiting they laugh and call me "Tiny Tim" or "Sis." They are actually good guys, even if they lean on me, pretty heavily—is there any way I can take a course fast to learn about sports, sort of a condensed course? I would like to surprise them.

Weltner Vows All-Out Push to Win Davis' Seat

Charles L. Weltner plunged into the Fifth District Congressional race Thursday with a pledge to represent the district as a major metropolitan complex—"not a 19th century village."

Weltner, a 34-year-old Atlanta lawyer, never mentioned incumbent Rep. James C. Davis by name but implied that Davis does not represent majority thinking.

"From this minute on, I am a candidate for Congress," Weltner said at a press conference. "I will wage a vigorous campaign all over this district, and I am going to win."

He promised to fight for Fulton, DeKalb and Rockdale citizens' right to a "full and equal voice in our own affairs" at the state level.

'NEW BEGINNINGS'

"This is a time for new beginnings," Weltner declared.

Weltner is taking on a 66-year-old congressman who has won eight consecutive terms.

The Democratic Primary winner is almost certain to face a Republican opponent in November, Weltner said. "I would feel good about running against a Republican. It would mean I had won the Democratic Primary."

When Weltner was asked whether he saw the race with Davis boiling down to one of conservatism versus liberalism, he replied:

"I don't accept the tag of a liberal. I don't know what that term means. I can't define conservatism. It will be on a basis of issues. We need greater attention on the problems of our district than has been shown."

Weltner said, "We have seen some perplexing problems in race relations. I believe that people of good will in this district are fully capable of finding just solutions by themselves. This district can do without interference from any outside source."

As for the county unit system, under which Davis has chosen to run, his opponent declared:

"I hope to see fair play for the 223,000 people of our district. We—one out of five Georgians—are virtually powerless at the hands of the county unit system. We, who pay 30 cents of Georgia's revenue dollar, are almost voiceless in the General Assembly."

QUALITY EDUCATION

He listed major problems facing the district as quality education, slum eradication, rapid transit development and expressway completion.

A native of Atlanta, Weltner is the great-grandson of the first Chief Justice of Georgia, Joseph Henry Lumpkin. His father was chancellor of the University System of Georgia and later president of Oglethorpe University.

Weltner attended R. L. Hope and North Fulton schools, Oglethorpe University and Columbia University Law School. He was admitted to the Georgia Bar at age 21. He once was associated with former Gov. Ellis Arnall's firm.

He served as counsel for the Citizens Crime Committee of Atlanta for three years and this year was named to the executive committee of the Atlanta Bar Association.

His wife is the former Betty Jean Center. They have four children, Elizabeth, Philip II, Susan Martin and Charles Jr. They reside on Rickenbacker Way.

Savannah's Producers Vote Milk Controls

SAVANNAH (UPI)—Milk producers in the Savannah area voted 67-0 Thursday to return to price controls.

The election returns will be certified by Superior Court Judge G. A. McWhorter, who held the election at the request of the Georgia Milk Commission.

The Savannah area dropped out of the control system Nov. 1 by request of milk producers who claimed unfair price competition.

$600,000 Won by Gamblers During Year in Georgia

Georgia gamblers won more than $600,000 during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961.

At least they reported winning that much to the Internal Revenue Service in Atlanta, and paid $80,146 on their state-forbidden earnings. Gambling is illegal in Georgia.

Tresspass Laid To Portugal

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—Senegal has charged Portugal with three violations of Senegalese territory, it was revealed Thursday.

The United Nations released the text of a cable sent by Senegalese Foreign Minister Doudou Thiam on Dec. 22 to Omar Loufi of the United Arab Republic, this month's president of the security council.

A total of $481,000 in wagering taxes was collected in the Atlanta region.

Broken down by states it amounted to: Alabama, $105,000; South Carolina, $9,000; North Carolina, $31,000; Mississippi, $70,000; Florida, $90,000, and Tennessee, $117,000.

The federal government collected $6,682,000 in excise taxes from the nation's bettors, in addition to money paid by 9,189 gamblers for $50 federal gambling stamps.

Illinois paid $834,000 and Kentucky $765,000, and Nevada slipped in at $597,000, with Washington following closely, paying $585,000.

Hawaii, Rhode Island and Wisconsin paid the least on gambling winnings, $1,000 each, and Vermonters paid none at all.

New Atlantans Will Like Weltner

By REG MURPHY
Constitution Political Editor

Charles Weltner's entry into the Fifth District congressional race means that several others are out of it.

DeKalb Rep. James Mackay, who has said for months he won't run, now will find people believing him.

DeKalb School Supt. Jim Cherry, who never finally closed the door in public, obviously closed it in private talks with Weltner.

Still not eliminated is Dr. Winston Burdine of Atlanta, but the people who were urging him to run probably now are turning to Weltner.

The announcement means that incumbent Rep. James C. Davis faces the same type opposition he has defeated with glee in the past.

But it also means that the population and attitude shifts in the district will be measured to a degree.

As Weltner pointed out Thursday, 205,000 people live in the district who weren't residents just 10 years ago. Statistics don't show whether more moved into the area from Georgia or from outside the state. It's a cinch, though, that neither group shares some of the basic attitudes the district held 10 years ago.

The 5-year-old who messes up our house unintentionally summed up such a development when she said in anger, "What a votin' development that is."

If Weltner can picture himself as having common interests with the in-migrants, he could shock Davis.

Here, for once, he starts with a definite advantage. Out-of-staters who have filled up DeKalb in recent years ask again and again, "What is the County Unit System, moving the unit system, and might line up with Weltner as long as he stays in a moderate mood."

Perhaps the most significant development growing out of Weltner's announcement, however, is the fact that Davis is returning to Washington knowing that he already has opposition.

Vandiver Is Named To Industry Panel

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Gov. Ernest Vandiver Thursday was named to the industrial development committee of the Southern Governor's Conference.

The appointment was made by Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, conference chairman.

Serving with Vandiver on the committee will be Gov. Farris Bryant of Florida and Gov. Bert Combs of Kentucky.

Prince Charles Hunts Pheasant

NORFOLK, England (UPI)—Prince Charles, 13, joined the men Wednesday for the first big pheasant hunt of the Christmas season at Sandringham Castle near here, it was disclosed Thursday.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

When heartburn or acid indigestion strikes anyone in your family, remember nothing works like Tums. Tums three antacid medicines work together to:

1. Neutralize excess acid fast and effectively.
2. Maintain normal stomach balance for long-lasting relief.
3. Give complete safety. Tums cause no side effects or acid rebound.

And Tums taste good too, with a delightful mint-fresh flavor that leaves your mouth feeling cool and clean.

Next time you need relief from heartburn or acid indigestion, try Tums—for the tummy!

U.S. Accuses Store Chain In Food Case

Colonial Stores, Inc., and the general manager for the firm's Atlanta Division were charged Thursday with four counts of allowing food to become adulterated.

The charges were made in a criminal information filed by U.S. District Attorney Charles Goodson for the Food and Drug Administration.

CALLED UNSANITARY

In the information, the government alleged that the firm stored black-eyed peas and flour in a building in East Point under unsanitary conditions.

General manager Augustus C. Parnell, 900 Barton Woods Rd., N.E., was named in the charges.

The government charges that the defendants had the food stored in the East Point building "accessible to rodents and did cause said food to be exposed to contamination by rodents."

VOLUNTARILY DESTROYED

The firm voluntarily segregated and destroyed the food lots in each case, Assistant U.S. District Attorney Robert C. Milam said.

Two groups of black-eyed peas shipped from California were listed in the charges as held in the building from Dec. 29, 1960, until Feb. 28, 1961, and from Dec. 28, 1960 until Mar. 1, 1961. The peas were in 100-lb. bags for re-packing, Milam said.

Sense of Unity Sought For India's Millions

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—A national committee has been looking into ways to give a sense of unity to India's more than 400 million people who speak many languages and dialects and are divided by caste and region.

Among its recommendations—Indian children should take a daily pledge of service to the country, saying "All Indians are my brothers and sisters."

As I See It

Networks Seldom Listen to Public

By PAUL JONES

The thousands of protests over cancellation next Tuesday of the daytime soaper, From These Roots, in favor of a family-type drama, Our Five Daughters, likely will go unheeded by the NBC-TV network because network executives seldom are swayed by public opinion.

Many viewers will recall the instance when NBC-TV canceled the highly popular Matinee Theater in face of irate letters from a quarter million viewers. The network declined to let viewers pay to keep the program on the air after a public spirited citizen raised some $250,000 for this purpose.

From These Roots is just another soap opera. The stories it tells usually deal with highly emotional incidents in the lives of very unhappy people.

I suspect that NBC-TV and other networks that have such programming would like to send it to the video honeypot, too, if only suitable material could be found to take its place.

I haven't seen a preview of Our Five Daughters but the title seems to indicate that this might be a happy show about a large, average American family whose lives are not fraught with unhappiness all of the time.

The move by NBC-TV is a wise one and I am sure From These Roots fans will find the substitute program equally diverting—or should I say time consuming.

WHILE PROTESTS by viewers failed to stay the execution of Matinee Theater and many other programs sent to the chopping block by the networks, an aroused viewing public apparently has convinced the producers of Hong Kong, canceled at the conclusion of last season, that they made a mistake.

Hong Kong, starring Rod Taylor as an adventure-loving newspaperman based in the Orient, was a strong favorite with women. Scripts for this show, for the most part, were well written and the show was reasonably well executed.

Hong Kong fans might like to know that the show is coming back to the air, though not under the title Hong Kong.

Rod Taylor will star in the show and he will again portray a newspaper reporter. But San Francisco will be his "beat". Possibly the Chinese community with its Oriental buildings will give the program enough of the old world atmosphere that Hong Kong fans will think they're looking at their old favorite all over again.

Nobody is happier about the new show, which will probably be titled San Francisco, Daleline: San Francisco or something equally imaginative, than is Taylor.

He didn't want the show to go off the air in the first place. "It was a shame," he said Thursday. "I put a lot of work into the series. I didn't want to go into TV in the first place. And when I did go, I set out to prove that you can put out a good adult product in an hour show. We really worked. I got so wrapped up in it that I didn't want to leave it."

Taylor said legal matters prevented the new show with the San Francisco background from being a carbon copy of Hong Kong.

"Everybody wants it that way (like the old show) but there is a big legal, money fight. So they'll do a new show keeping the character of Glenn Evans. But he'll be in San Francisco instead of Hong Kong. We can get around it that way."

I recall seeing Rod film the first episode of the show when I was in Hollywood two years ago. At the time I was as optimistic about its success as Rod was. I was surprised when the network cancelled it. But I was not surprised to hear that it is going back into production at 20th Century Fox.

MRS. C. W. McFARLAND, of Marietta, writes: "Why does Carol Burnett of the Garry Moore Show always in the finale give the lobe of her ear a little tug? Could this be her way of saying good night to some one maybe?"

Either that or she just likes to tug at her ear.

Ginger and Nat Sing with Dinah

By THE TV SCOUT

BEST BET—The Dinah Shore Show is a sort of pre-New Year's Eve party, full of good songs and good singers to perform them. Besides Miss Shore, there's Nat "King" Cole and Ginger Rogers, two old pros.

The only break in the music comes when George Burns drops in with one of his cigarologues.

Highlights include Miss Shore with a bluesy "Do You Know What It Means to Miss New Orleans"; a Shore-Cole duet to "Friendless Blues"; Miss Rogers (beautifully groomed) doing "I Could Have Danced All Night"; and a rousing opening production number with everybody doing "Ain't We Got Fun." 9:30-10:30 (Ch. 2). (Color) is has the virtue of explaining in precise terms why gambling is bad for a community. And it also has a graphic portrait of a bookie joint in operation. The basic plot concerns Richard Long, as a young assistant DA who falls for the lure of easy money and becomes a "bagman" for the gamblers. Eduardo Cinnelli is properly sinister as the chief gambler, with Steve Forrest the syndicate's ruthless lawyer.

10:30-11 (Ch. 5)—Eyewitness has its second annual year-end show Friday. Like last year's, the aim here is, in producer Leslie Midgley's words, "to assemble the scenes the people remember, not necessarily the biggest news stories." Pictorial value, then, is the guiding quality in putting together this miscellaneous melange. You'll see such memorable sights as President Kennedy's inauguration, Dag Hammarskjöld's empty chair, the Dominican riots, Mrs. Kennedy speaking French and Spanish—and The Twist.

7:30-8 (Ch. 11)—Straightaway follows a well-worn road with its chief character Friday. John Considine plays the collegiate basketball hero, a would-be medical student saddled with mounting debts, a pregnant wife and a bawky car. His problems are compounded when the inevitable gambler comes along with the inevitable point-shaving proposition. The bawky car has brought the hero to the Straightaway garage, and the two merry mechanics take over to see that justice and athletic ability triumph.

8:30-9:30 (Ch. 5)—Route 66 treads familiar ground and introduces a familiar character—Beulah Bondi as the matriarch who refuses to accept her dead son's wife and child. This time, the matriarch is a Pennsylvania chicken farmer, the young widow a Swedish girl (Inger Stevens) and there is also that favorite Hollywood character, the Bible-quoting but weak-kneed son (Pat Hingle). Add Tod and Buz, stir lightly and you can just about write the final scene yourself.

8:30-9:30 (Ch. 2)—Robert Taylor's Detectives has a good jewel robbery story, and it's such a neat plot that you may wind up rooting for the bad guys. Chief robber is James Whitmore, who uses the guise of a priest to gain easy access to the jeweler's convention display of rare gems. The plot is foiled (as most of them are) by a bit of bad luck; in this case, the getaway truck has an accident. The detectives win, but through no fault of their own.

10-10:30 (Ch. 5)—The Twilight Zone takes us back to two phases of the World War II Fighting in The Philippines. Dean Stockwell is a shining new lieutenant, who arrives near the end of the war and wants to kill his share of the enemy while there's still time. Albert Salmi is the weary sergeant who considers the extremely inhuman. Suddenly, Stockwell finds himself in another time and another uniform, during the earlier battle on the island. And he learns something about inhumanity.

10-11 (Ch. 11)—The evils of gambling are pointed out clearly on Target: The Corruptors. While the story here is routine,

TV Return Possible For Howard Smith

By VAL ADAMS

(Copyright 1961 by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK—Negotiations are in progress for Howard K. Smith to return to television with a half-hour weekly program of news analysis over the American Broadcasting Company network.

If negotiations are successful, the program probably would be presented on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 8 p.m. under the sponsorship of an insurance firm. A spokesman for James C. Hagerly, vice president in charge of news for ABC, confirmed a report that the 7:30 to 8 p.m. time period on Wednesdays is being held open for a news program. Until last Wednesday the hour from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock had been filled by the Steve Allen show, which has been canceled. Straightaway, a Friday evening feature, has been rescheduled for Wednesdays at 8 p.m.

Paul Had Faith In Darkest Hour

Paul Sails for Rome. Acts of the Apostles, Chapter 27, verses 1 to 44.

When it was decided that we should sail for Italy, Paul and some other prisoners were handed over to a centurion named Julius, of the Augustan Cohort. We embarked in a ship of Adramyttium, bound for ports in the province of Asia, and put out to sea. In our party was Aristarchus, a Macedonian from Thessalonica. Next day we landed at Sidon; and Julius very considerably allowed Paul to go to his friends to be cared for. Leaving Sidon we sailed under the lee of Cyprus because of the headwinds, then across the open sea off the coast of Cilicia and Pamphylia, and so reached Myra in Lycia.

There the centurion found an Alexandrian vessel bound for Italy and put us aboard. For a good many days we made little headway, and we were hard put to it to reach Cnidus. Then, as the wind continued against us, off Salomone we began to sail under the lee of Crete, and, hugging the coast, struggled on to a place called Fair Havens, not far from the town of Lasea.

STORM AT SEA

By now much time had been lost. The Fast was already over, and it was risky to go on with the voyage. Paul therefore gave them this advice: 'I can see, gentlemen,' he said, 'that this voyage will be disastrous: it will mean grave loss, loss not only of ship and cargo but also of life.' But the centurion paid more attention to the captain and to the owner of the ship than to what Paul said; and as the harbour was unsuitable for wintering, the majority were in favour of putting out to sea, hoping if they could get so far, to winter at Phoenix, a Cretan harbour exposed south-west and north-west. So when a southerly breeze sprang up, they thought that their purpose was as good as achieved, and, weighing anchor, they sailed along the coast of Crete hugging the land. But before very long a fierce wind, the 'North-easter' as they call it, tore down from the landward side. It caught the ship and, as it was impossible to keep head to wind, we had to give way and run before it. We ran under the lee of a small island called Cauda, and with a struggle managed to get the ship's boat under control. When they had hoisted it aboard, they made use of tackle and undergirded the ship. Then, because they were afraid of running on to the shallows of Syrtis, they lowered the mainsail and let her drive. Next day, as we were making very heavy weather, they began to lighten the ship; and on the third day they jettisoned the ship's gear with their own hands. For days on end there was no sign of either sun or stars, a great storm was raging, and our last hopes of coming through alive began to fade.

VISION OF PAUL

When they had gone for a long time without food, Paul stood up among them and said, 'You should have taken my advice, gentlemen, not to sail from Crete; then you would have avoided this damage and loss. But now I urge you not to lose heart; not a single life will be lost, only the ship. For last night there stood by me an angel of God whose I am and whom I worship. "Do not be afraid, Paul," he said, "it is ordained that you shall appear before the Emperor; and, be assured, God has granted you the lives of all who are sailing with you." So keep up your courage: I trust in God that it will turn out as I have been told; though we have to be cast ashore on some island.'

The fourteenth night came and we were still drifting in the Sea of Adria. In the middle of the night the sailors felt that land was getting nearer. They sounded and found twenty fathoms; and, fearing that we might be cast ashore on a rugged coast they dropped four anchors from the stern and prayed for daylight to come. The sailors tried to abandon ship; they had already lowered the ship's boat, pretending they were going to lay out anchors from the bows, when Paul said to the centurion and the soldiers, 'Unless these men stay on board you can none of you come off safely.' So the soldiers cut the ropes of the boat and let her drop away.

Shortly before daybreak Paul urged them all to take some food. 'For the last fourteen days,' he said, 'you have lived in suspense and gone hungry; you have eaten nothing whatever. So I beg you to have something to eat: your lives depend on it. Remember, not a hair of your heads will be lost.' With these words, he took bread, gave thanks to God in front of them all, broke it, and began eating. Then they all plucked up courage, and took food themselves. There was on board two hundred and seventy-six of us in all. When they had eaten as much as they wanted they lightened the ship by dumping the corn in the sea.

A Reading from the New Testament of The New English Bible

PRISONERS' LIVES SPARED

When day broke they could not recognize the land, but they noticed a bay with a sandy beach, on which they planned, if possible, to run the ship ashore. So they slipped the anchors and let them go; at the same time they loosened the lashings of the steering-paddles, set the foresail to the wind, and let her drive to the beach. But they found themselves caught between cross-currents and ran the ship aground, so that the bow stuck fast and remained immovable, while the stern was being pounded to pieces by the breakers. The soldiers thought they had better kill the prisoners for fear that any should swim away and escape; but the centurion wanted to bring Paul safely through and prevented them from carrying out their plan. He gave orders that those who could swim should jump overboard first and get to land; the rest were to follow, some on planks, some on parts of the ship. And thus it was that all came safely to land.

Wheeler Lock Collapse Laid To Clay Seam

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — An almost invisible layer of slippery clay about as thick as an oil slick on a service station floor caused the massive collapse of a lock at Wheeler Dam on the Tennessee river last June, engineers reported Thursday.

Two men died the night of June 2 when 436 feet of the landward wall of the 25-year-old lock collapsed. River traffic was snarled and has not yet fully recovered. The collapse also threw a minor hitch in the nation's space effort and nuclear energy research.

The Tennessee Valley Authority hired a team of three nationally known engineers in June to hunt for the cause. They issued a bulky report Thursday blaming the whole thing on a seam of fine, slippery clay about one-sixteenth of an inch thick.

A new lock was under construction next to the old one which was built by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers in 1936-38. The construction work caused the land wall of the old lock to slide along the clay seam like a skater on ice.

Bypass Ludowici, AAA Urges Motorists

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—The American Automobile Association has once again urged Florida-bound motorists to bypass Ludowici, Ga., which has been on and off the AAA's "speed trap" list several times in recent years.

Also affected by the AAA's suggested alternate route is Glennville, 21 miles north of Ludowici on U.S. Highway 301.

The new blacklisting of Ludowici was revealed in a bulletin which the AAA issued Thursday to its 7.5 million members. According to the Savannah Motor Club, Ludowici has set up a new electric speed timer just inside its city limits where nearby signs drop the speed limit from 60 to 35 miles per hour too abruptly for motorists to reduce their speed.

The AAA reported that "in recent months about three-fourths of all traffic complaints about enforcement methods in Georgia have originated in the Ludowici and Glennville areas."

Extra Police To Check on Holiday Drivers

Beefed up police patrols will keep a sharp watch for intoxicated drivers in Atlanta during the New Year's holiday weekend, Traffic Supt. James F. Brown said Thursday.

The motorcycle patrol Saturday and Sunday will be doubled. Brown said, and uniform patrol units also will join in the drive.

Traffic fatalities in Atlanta this year number 55, six fewer than the 1960 total. Injuries this year are 384 to 2,580 compared to 2,964 for 1960. Total crashes are up 1,024, or 18,213 compared with 17,189.

Speed has been reduced as a danger factor, Brown pointed out. He said charges for speeding this year dropped 9,399 under the number booked last year. However, 468 more charges for drunk driving have been placed.

The State Patrol also plans hard-hitting enforcement. The patrol has predicted that 12 persons will die in the period from 6 p.m. Friday until midnight Monday.

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP)—Six unidentified men attacked the police station in a small town near here early Thursday and killed one of two officers on duty. They tied up the other and escaped with weapons.

A House study committee turned thumbs down Thursday on a federal plan to regulate billboards along interstate highways in Georgia.

Although it does believe there should be some "proper regulatory legislation" for billboards, the committee said in its report:

"We do not believe that any legislation which is enacted should be dependent on federal legislation or that a state program should be subject to federal control."

The committee recommended that the next Legislature create a special committee composed of legislators and other citizens "representing both sides of the issue" to work out a state program.

WORK TOGETHER

It pointed out that "proponents of outdoor advertising have indicated a desire to work towards proper legislation."

The area which would come under federal regulations does not include the 300-foot-wide right-of-way for highways. All billboards are banned from this strip.

The billboard regulations would extend out to a point 660 feet on each side of the center line of the highway.

The study group, headed by Rep. M. King Tucker of Burke County, emphasized that its findings represented a "final decision" concerning the federal plan.

The program would provide states with one-half of 1 per cent added federal funds for Interstate System sections found eligible. This would be in addition to 90 per cent of the total funds needed for the construction of the highways.

535 MILES ELIGIBLE

The committee said only 535 miles of Georgia's 1,108 miles of interstate routes would be eligible. (Sections within cities and commercial or industrial zones are not eligible.)

This would mean Georgia would be eligible for an estimated $1,588,000.

The committee said it feels "this amount would not even be sufficient to pay the costs of administration and enforcement of the program which would have to be established in order to receive such funds."

It added that "in order to receive these additional federal funds, strict compliance with all federal rules and regulations would be necessary, not only at the beginning, but now and forever after."

"It should also be pointed out that there is no guarantee that such funds would even be made available."

UP TO STATE

Tucker's committee doesn't like the idea of the administration, enforcement and policing of the billboard program becoming a state responsibility.

They also point out that such legislation applies only to outdoor advertising and not to "eyesores" such as "junk heaps, trash heaps, junk car yards, ramshackle buildings, and the like."

In answer to supporters of billboard control, the committee said:

"We certainly do not have any quarrel with those who are motivated by a desire to maintain the beauty of our countryside. We agree that steps should be taken to achieve this objective."

Other members of the study committee were Reps. William C. Wickham of Muscogee County, M. Parks Brown of Hart County, James H. Floyd of Chattooga County and Francis Joiner of Washington County.

Santa Claus Loses Sole Beer Permit

The only beer license in Santa Claus, Ga.,—which has a population of 11—was revoked Thursday by the State Revenue Department.

The license had been issued to Marvin S. Stripling, Gene Nasworthy and Kent Youmans. They all failed to appear at a hearing here Thursday before Deputy Revenue Commissioner Jack Hodgkins, the official said.

Hogdkins said the three men were found guilty of selling whisky without a license and on Sunday at the Regular Veterans Association club.

Officials of Toombs County testified at the hearing that the club had been raided a number of times in the past 60 days. They told Hodgkins they had picked up four slot machines and had charged a man with running a poker game.

'No Well' Greeting Cards Explain Postponed Party

By KATHRYN GRAYBURN

Conspicuous by its absence this year will be the Leonid Skvirsky's New Year's Eve Party, which has been an annual event since 1935.

The reason why the party will not be held this year is implied on the Skvirsky's Christmas cards, which were especially designed to convey the host's convalescent state since his recent heart attack. The cards bear the greeting, "No Well", instead of the traditional Noel.

Several hundred Atlantans have assembled each year at the Skvirsky home in the Ponce de Leon apartments, where hospitality with a foreign flavor was dispensed until the break of day. The fetes were always memorable for unusual decorative themes and floor shows, which featured entertainers ranging from hula dancers to operatic soloists.

Mrs. Skvirsky, who incidentally, is one of the best pistol marksmen in town, always executes a native dance wearing appropriate costume.

The Skvirskys had their first New Year's Eve party while living in India and continued it later in Shanghai, China.

Mr. Skvirsky is already planning next year's celebration.

IN KEEPING with the U.S. Army's tradition of welcoming the New Year, the Commanding General's New Year's Day reception will be held at Ft. McPherson Officers' Open Mess Jan. 1.

Receiving with the host, Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trappell, Third U.S. Army commander, and Mrs. Trappell will be Maj. Gen. Walter B. Yeager, deputy commander, and Brig. Gen. Ferdinand T. Unger, chief of Staff, and Mrs. Unger.

SYDNEY DAVIS, who is spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Davis, at their home on Peachtree Road, will entertain at an open house this afternoon.

Serving will be Dolly Vance, Elizabeth Anne Sylvester and Lillian Christian Webb.

Lloyd Davis Jr. is enjoying a hunting and fishing trip to Florida as the guest of his uncle, Allen Webb and cousins, Jim, Lanny and Ned.

Joining them in this annual event were 10 Atlanta boys and their fathers, all of whom will return just in time to celebrate New Year's Eve.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Looks Deceive--Twins Do Differ

By YOLANDE GWIN

Cathy and Carol Friedman are the eight-year-old twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Friedman.

That is where the similarity ends.

The unlike twins are in the third grade of the Margaret Mitchell School.

"I go along on the theory that you must discipline twins in a different way from one child," said their mother. "There must be a physical restraint. I have tried to make them adjust themselves as a person, not as duplicates."

CURLY HAIR

Now take Cathy for instance. She has curly hair and a strong maternal instinct. She is also the homemaker type and likes to set the table, fix and clean up around the home. She enjoys dancing and her favorite foods are heavy, but nourishing things such as meat and potatoes. She loves rich desserts. She is very feminine in everything and likes frills and bows on her clothes.

By sharp contrast there is Carol. Her hair is straight and she goes in for the more plain or tailored clothes. She is very artistic and has great imagination and is highly emotional. She is not in the least domestic but much prefers outdoor sports to the more domestic things. She loves fruits and vegetables. At the present her ambition is to be an artist.

DRESS ALIKE

"The girls like to dress alike but I have them wear different colors," continued their mother. "We do not stress the fact that they are twins at home, but they share a room together. Each has her own bed, dresser and desk. We give them duplicate gifts. Many times if by chance they get different presents, each wants the other's. Each wishes she was the other, but neither are jealous. It is a strange thing."

The girls are very congenial and play together without friction.

They were born Nov. 10, 1953. To announce their arrival, their father sent out announcements to the family's hundreds of friends.

The message?

regular meal," laughed Mrs. J. A. Lassetter.

Recently, Brownie invited about 25 guests in for coffee, but you could hardly see the coffee service for the elegant sandwiches, salads, cookies, candies, canapés, nuts and hors d'oeuvres.

Her menu ran something like this:

Chicken Salad Sandwiches
Shrimp Canapés
Crystallized Ginger Canapés
Creamed Crab on Pattie Shells
Biscuits with Canadian Bacon
Cheese Straws

Pusharatas
Fruitcake
Coffee
Rolled Date Sticks
Mincemeat Salad

The Mincemeat Salad can be served for other functions than coffees. And you're missing a real treat if you don't give it a try.

MINCEMEAT SALAD

1 cup mincemeat with rum and brandy
1 can black Bing cherries with juice
2 pkgs. black cherry gelatin
Water

Add enough boiling water to the amount of juice to equal the amount of liquid on the back of the packages of gelatin. When gelatin begins to thicken, add mincemeat and cherries. Serve on lettuce cups.

"The chicken salad is so common," said Brownie, "that I really can't give you the amount of ingredients only the list of foods that go into the salad."

She chops the chicken fine and adds chopped celery and nuts. To this mixture, she adds salad dressing, lemon juice and chopped pimiento.

CREAMED CRAB

1 lb. crab meat
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 can mushrooms, cut fine
1 cup grated cheese
1 small can pimiento
2 eggs, beaten well
1 large can evaporated milk
Salt and pepper
1½ tbsps. butter

Mix eggs and milk. Pour in grated cheese, pimiento, mushrooms. Cook until thick in double boiler. Add eggs and crab meat.

PATTIE SHELL

1 cup and 2 tbsps. flour
¼ lb. butter
¼ tsp. salt
2 tbsps. grated Parmesan
1 small egg, slightly beaten

Soften butter. Measure flour and salt into sifter. Sift into medium size bowl. Add remaining ingredients. With hand work in ingredients. Toss on lightly floured board for few minutes. Chill dough and pinch off dough the size of hazelnut. Press dough into form and press out dough on bottoms and sides of form. Makes 30 shells. Bake at 450 degrees for 5 minutes. Reduce heat to 400 degrees and bake an additional 8 to 10 minutes.

FRUIT BARS

2 cups pecans
Sprinkle over 8-inch pan that has been greased and floured. Pour over the nuts the following ingredients:

Cream together—
¼ lb. margarine
1½ cups brown sugar
Add—
2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup flour, unsifted
¼ tsp. soda

Sift soda with flour and sift into creamed mixture. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Press batter over nuts with wet hands.

Over this press:
½ lb. candied cherries
6 slices candied pineapple
½ lb. chopped citron

Bake for 1 hour at 325 degrees. Cool before slicing. Dip knife into hot water before slicing.

DATE ROLLS

1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 stick butter
1 small pkg. dates

Mix together and cook over medium heat for 8 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add 1 cup chopped nuts, 1 cup rice crispies. When cool enough to handle, make into balls. Roll in coconut.

Discipline the Palate For Holiday Eating

The feasting that goes with the holiday season can add unattractive pounds almost without your knowing it.

Holiday parties and meals almost always feature rich, tasty and oh-so-fattening foods.

While you're in the holiday spirit of good will to others, do yourself a favor as you complete plans for New Year's celebrations: Be temperate in the dining and dining department. You'll feel better and your clothes will look better.

The average woman takes a lot less exercise in the winter than in the summer. Gardening, sight-seeing, hiking, vacationing are all summertime pursuits that help burn up calories. In the winter exercise falls off but the appetite, unfortunately, does not. How about checking your doctor for a special winter diet and an indoor exercise routine.

The bedroom needn't be turned into a gymnasium for the exercise. Simple calisthenics require no special equipment and can do wonders for the figure, reducing bulges, tightening the flabby areas and restoring muscle tone. Basic calisthenics are described on radio and television programs and are illustrated in the newspapers. The important thing is that they be followed consistently.

After exercising, while the body is tired but the muscles warm and flexible, is the time for a spirited massage. It enhances the exercising and helps prevent the muscles stiffening later, after they cool. Following the exercise session, it is especially refreshing to take a hot bath or shower. In this case, massage should be less vigorous; and in no case should one go out in the cold until the body heat has returned to normal.

for the "over-all" relief most people need

Feeling well, and success, go hand in hand. You can't afford to put up with headachy upsets on your job—or the feverish aches and tensed-up feelings that often accompany them. Why should you? All three kinds of distress respond remarkably fast to the Triple-Aid Action of St. Joseph Aspirin.

1. It relieves aches and pains with the most trusted pain-reliever known to medicine. 2. Brings down temperature with a medically famous action. 3. Eases tense feelings that can follow colds or headaches.

Pilots to Entertain Foreigners

Some 100 Pilot Club members from over the state will join in an unusual New Year's Eve celebration. They will host about 100 foreign guests, visiting Georgia over the holiday season as guests of the Georgia Center for Continuing Education on the University of Georgia's Athens campus.

Headed by Miss Barbara Calhoun of Macon, state governor, and Mrs. Rachel Caldwell of Loganville, party chairman, the business women's organization will toss a night-club style party for the visitors, 9 p.m. through midnight, Sunday, at the Center.

"Opening of the Continental Club" will be the party theme, according to Mrs. Caldwell, and Monroe Pilot Club members will act as official hostesses.

Entertainment will be both American and foreign, she said.

A jazz band of young Athens musicians will furnish live music for dancing and accompanying vaudeville acts. And both Georgians and their foreign guests will participate in the program.

Polynesian decorations and refreshments are planned.

Make Impression as Grand Lady at Weekend Galas!

By RAYMONDE ALEXANDER
Constitution Fashion Editor

What are you doing New Year's—New Year's Eve?

Chances are you have big plans and they involve a dress. Well, there are dresses and then there are DRESSES. You want yours to be the later.

Then, why not join the fashion pace-setters and make it a long dress? When the long dress was revived a season or so ago there were cries of horror. Gals had become accustomed to the short formal. The short one fit in with the current way of life. They could get into and out of cars easily. They could go more places because they were more versatile.

But when more and more long dresses began to appear the horror showed signs of melting down to envy. After all the long dress did make a grand impression. It did hide not so good legs. It did give a girl that "great lady" feeling. being welcomed back like the prodigal. And New Year's Eve is likely to see it welcoming a new year of full fashion for it and for the girl who wears one.

This can be attributed to the excitement captured in some of the dresses. Take the flaming orange chiffon that has been gathered softly on to a bodice of sequin iridescents. It's like a New Year's Eve firework going off as the sequins change colors as they move up from a lowered waistline on variegated panels.

Then there is an emerald green of peau de soie with a cuff around the strapless top of twinkling sequins, crystals, and bugle beads.

And there is always the femme fatale dress in bewitching black. The one in mind has a slinky skirt of chiffon and a bodice of back sequins.

Women Give Their Reasons For Liking Bloomin' Things

By JEAN ROONEY
Constitution Club Editor

Dogwood trees and Atlanta have religious, civic, even a romantic association.

In a recent Dogwood Tree contest sponsored by the Atlanta Women's Chamber of Commerce, contestants offered a variety of reasons for desiring the flowery white and pink trees.

Mrs. Lonnie D. Jobe, a young Atlanta housewife, sought the gift trees "to perpetuate her husband's 'love affair' with fair Atlanta."

A newcomer to the city from New Orleans, Mrs. Jobe wants to go native with dogwood. "It's his favorite tree," she confided about her husband, a native of Atlanta.

LEAD GOOD LIFE

"He's so native, he believes that if a person leads a good life, he'll go to Atlanta when he dies," she jokes.

Four other winners had varying reasons. Teen-ager Zack Tolbert wants "to grow the white blossoms for my mother."

"She loves them very much," explains Zack, age 16 and a Roosevelt High School eleventh-grader.

Though his mother, Mrs. M. L. Tolbert, has failed at growing them, Zack thinks he will have more success with the five he has won.

Mrs. Nellie Gaudry of 1142 Pluma Drive, SE, gave religious reasons for wanting the trees.

"Our Lord was crucified on a dogwood tree," she reminds. "Let's beautify our city with them to show everyone we are a loving, Christian city."

Businessman Bill Estes of 1828 Audubon Drive, NE, wanted the flowery trees to "start a trend."

FOLLOW THE EXAMPLE

"Maybe other people in the neighborhood will follow our example," Mr. Estes reasoned.

He plans to plant his prize along the front of his Northside home for the power of suggestion.

And Mrs. Homer L. Sangster of Vienna gave this prize-winning reason:

"They help to enhance the beauty of the home, the center of love and the foundation of our lives."

Information on the care and planting of dogwood is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: The Atlanta Women's Chamber of Commerce, 1101 Commerce Bldg., Atlanta 3, Ga.

Doris

Merchants call this the 13th month, the interim period between the old year and the new, and surely it is a time of velvet we never really count on, a kind of unexpected bonus.

The days between Christmas and New Year's telescope in anticipation, they foreshorten into oblivion when viewed from the future, and do not exist as a proper interlude until here they are, seven extra days we didn't believe were coming to us.

In normal households it is probably the pleasantest week of the year.

The house is still redolent with goodwill. Wreaths on the door are willing, the tree is shedding, but the glow of lights glimmers magically from wide windows into the darkness.

The holiday foods still have not been completely devoured, and while the white meat has disappeared, there are always remnants of dressing that, with a ladle of leftover gravy, can evoke the flavor, if not the fact, of the remembered feast.

Toys have not yet been demolished. Bells have not yet been lost from the nose cone of the play missile, spokes have not been bent on the new bike, the radio has not yet developed squawks and the new records have not been scratched.

Gifts still crowd the mantels in bountiful disarray.

It is not yet time for bills, nor yet so late the thank-you notes have begun to prod with their goading taunt.

I have one friend who brings a halt to all this abruptly, two days before the New Year.

Every fragment of Christmas is packed away, every bite of rich food given to others, wrapped to be frozen or shoved into the back of the refrigerator.

She buys the ingredients for an honest stew, laces it with everyday vegetables, simmers it long and slowly with not an herb or a paprika or a peppercorn, and serves it frugally with crusty bread and cold milk.

She invites her favorite friends, and they sit before the fire, without music or toasts or special conviviality and talk quietly about the things that come to mind.

It is a kind of preparation, a pause, before the inventory of January 1, to settle the disorders, sort out the errors of thought and go over the old shackles of opinion.

An Episcopalian, she changes from the tender story of the Nativity to the smart whiplash commands of Christianity. She gets out a copy of a pastoral letter from the House of Bishops of a year or so before, and reads it again.

It dealt firmly with the frightening facts of our time, —men against men, rival nationalisms, opposing philosophies, competing economic systems and fierce racial tensions.

After the soft, gentle story of the birth of Christ, it scrutinizes five great truths, the creative meeting of souls, the sacredness of law, God's judgment in our divisions, the light of reason, and the membership we share together in the church.

It is a good way to prepare for a new beginning, and this is the time for it.

Ask Amy Way-Out Problems A Game?

DEAR AMY LARKIN: Is it all right for a 15-year-old teenage girl to go away with a married man to a cabin in Maine, and go out with him to bars every night? —QUESTIONING.

DEAR AMY LARKIN: I am 17, very pretty, and come from a good family. Recently I met a fellow who is 19, very handsome, has a good family. We are engaged and very happy. What I'd like to know is: how can I have problems like other teenagers? —BORED

DEAR AMY LARKIN: I'm sick and tired of immature teenage boys. I was thinking of calling an elderly man next door for a date next Saturday, and also asking him if he has a friend for my friend. What do you think? —A MATURE TEENAGER

I think you three girls are playing Amy Larkin, the local teenage parlor game. According to a young friend of mine, making up Dear-Amy's is most likely to occur about 3 a.m. at a spend-the-night party, when the hostess has got to think of something real crazy or her guests will slump into sleep.

This kind of make-up is a good exercise in human nature, and is as far as some of you will ever get in fiction writing. The tragedy is that nothing invented at 3 a.m. could be as bizarre or pathetic as some of the real-life letters that come to my mailbox, with revelations of loneliness, violence, fear, sin, guilt, hurt, grief, intolerable conflict and friendlessness.

But the real letter-writers are very often people of courage—people who know how to try, and try again. That's what makes the job exciting rather than depressing, and if you girls wanted to funny up my mail like this I don't mind. Good luck to you, growing up, and have a Happy New Year!

DEAR AMY LARKIN: I LOVE chocolate. I am so scared my face will break out. Do you have any suggestions to keep my face clear? —15 AND HICKIFIED.

If you can't choose between this and that, you'll have to face the consequences. Give up chocolate if you must. Avoid other sweets and greasy foods, never use creams or oily lotions. And scrub your face with thick soap suds several times a day.

Good Health

Early Action Can Check Diabetes

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can one check diabetes before it is too late? I have lost 15 pounds by going on a low fat diet because of a gall bladder condition. My doctor tells me I will have diabetes in five or 10 years. My two older sisters have it. I am 66, feel fine and am very active.—Mrs. H.

Diabetes can be checked before it is too late.

With your family history of diabetes—two older sisters, and I daresay some of your ancestors must have had it too—you have good reason to be concerned. Heredity is extremely important in diabetes.

I would assume, as well, that your doctor detected some signs of the approach of diabetes. So let's just accept the facts: There is strong probability you will develop this disease.

So much for the dreary side. What's to be said on the optimistic side?

First, reducing your weight is the most valuable step. Whether the weight reduction is because of a low-fat diet because of any other reason for reducing, it's good for you. If you are now down to a normal weight for your height, fine. If not, then keep on reducing until you do reach normal weight. Then—stay there.

Early detection and treatment is the best way to offset the dangers of diabetes. Oh, I do not mean you can indefinitely avoid having diabetes, but you can prevent it from doing the damage that otherwise it would do.

Diabetes, of course, is a disease in which the body no longer can use up the amount of sugar it receives—and "sugar" doesn't mean just the table sugar you have in your coffee or on your cereal. It means all the various kinds of sugars which are created, chemically, from all the food you eat. Some foods have more than others; just about all have some.

When the body can't use all the sugar, it piles up in the blood in the form of "blood sugar." Then it spills over and appears as "sugar in the urine." That's why urinalysis is such a good test for diabetes, but blood sugar tests are even more useful.

Diabetes is a sneaky disease in the beginning. Blood sugar levels often go down amazingly, and sugar in the urine often disappears when a person reduces to normal weight. This is especially true of people old enough to understand things clearly.

But they also are smart enough to realize that a decline in either sugar level doesn't mean we are "cured." It means the condition is being staved off. So keep staving it off. Keep the weight down. Don't become over-confident. The easiest way to lose a ball game—or a battle against diabetes—is to be over-confident.

Can doctors use a brain wave machine on a 12-year-old child to see if there has been any damage?—Mrs. E. S.

Yes, it's being done all the time. But keep in mind that while the machine (electro-encephalograph) can detect physical damage and disclose patterns indicative of convulsive disorders etc., it is not a device to measure intelligence.

Dr. Molner regrets he cannot answer letters individually. Readers' letters are used in his column when possible.

Trenton Paper Raises Prices

TRENTON, N.J. (AP)—The Trenton Evening Times announced Thursday it will raise its prices next Tuesday from 5 cents a copy to 7 cents.

In a front-page announcement, The Times said it was raising the price reluctantly because of rising costs. It said the price of the Sunday Times-Advertiser would remain 15 cents.

Astrological Forecast

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21 to April 19): Cycle is such that you are advised not to make an issue of minor disagreements. Listen rather than talk.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): As year draws to close, Taurus, you think of future, with stress on domestic matters. Try tact, understanding.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You can accomplish wonders today by "zigzagging." That is, Gemini, do not permit yourself to become directly involved in disputes which others start.

CANCER (June 22 to July 21): This could be one of those days when you might just relax and let the world go by. Sun, Mars, Venus, Mercury—even Saturn—opposite your sign.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Add substance to ideas. Put them into action by seeing the right people. Tonight fine for party.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Moon position emphasizes personal possessions, gain, income, hobby. Be cooperative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Cycle reaching peak, which means now is time to show what you can do. Grab opportunity and run to victory.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You have the ability, the power to achieve desires. Today be strong!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): State your position. Tell what you can do. The frank, Sagittarian approach is called for today. Be yourself!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Romance highlighted. Also, creative activity helps bring you out of shell.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Be sure you know what it is you really want to keep . . . and what must be discarded. Start deciding!

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Fantasy at this time could cause all the blocks to come tumbling down. See things as they exist. IF BORN TODAY . . . happy birthday! You break out of rut during coming year. Be willing to accept and make changes. Love stressed in 1962.

Some Came Running

JACKSONVILLE—After a dozen days of holiday recreation Georgia Tech football players mustered at the Gator Bowl Thursday afternoon and then pitched their first workout since Dec. 1 in the adjacent Jacksonville baseball park.

Coach Bobby Dodd, who has established a record 8-1 bowl chart via a do-it-yourself conditioning kit, inspected his troops and pronounced them physically fit for combat.

"I'm confident that the boys who will play against Penn State Saturday did a lot of running on their own," Dodd said, standing in right field and observing maneuvers. "I mean the first 25 boys, who'll be in there. I doubt whether the fourth team players ran very much. I know I wouldn't if I weren't going to play."

"If we get beat by Penn State Saturday," Dodd continued, "it won't be because we're not in condition. As a matter of fact, a few of the boys we asked to lose some weight are lighter now than they were when the season ended."

Dodd was also pleased that one man was heavier, Billy Williamson, who dipped to 147 after the Georgia game, is now a husky 155-pounder.

"I feel real fine," said Williamson before the workout. And that, of course, is an encouraging note to the Engineers, for Williamson had not been hale and hearty since the Duke game. In fact, he was sick the day of the Georgia game, but it wasn't apparent as he scored two touchdowns against the Bulldogs.

Trainer Buck Andel, who focuses a keen eye on the Techs, checked individuals in the dressing quarters, observed the drill and expressed satisfaction with the health of his patients. An excellent bowl prophet in the past, Andel feels that the Engineers are ready mentally and physically for a peak performance against State.

Engineers Employ Open-Door Policy

As an icy wind whipped across the baseball diamond, Dodd, bundled in an overcoat, watched his men work while he chatted with waiters.

Someone remarked that Tech's open-door policy was a sharp contrast to Penn State's secret drills between locked gates at St. Augustine. Dodd glanced at shivering observers, grinned and said, "Everyone is welcome to watch us work out. In fact, I wish the Penn State coaches were here watching us instead of studying those movies. That's where you find out what the other team really does."

Dodd, naturally, has conducted a thorough study of Penn State films.

"From what I've seen in the films, I'm positive Penn State is the best offensive team we've faced," the Tech boss replied when a man asked for an appraisal of the Pennsylvanians. "They have an outstanding quarterback in Galen Hall. He doesn't give you anything. He really hurts you with the short passing game, and he doesn't throw for interceptions. He reminds me a lot of Pat Trammell of Alabama."

"Compare Penn State with a team we played this year? Well, they aren't like any team we've met. I'd say they resemble Auburn more than any of our opponents."

Dodd Expects Winner to Cash Three TDs

Though Penn State racked up 231 points en route to a 7-3 campaign and the Gator Bowl, the generous Lions yielded 128.

Convinced that Tech won't be able to prevent State from moving the ball, Dodd anticipates a scoreathon Saturday.

"I'd say that the winning team will have to score three touchdowns," Dodd said. "Penn State scored two or more touchdowns in eight games, and I know they'll move the ball on us. I hope we can move it."

No coach in football enjoys a bowl junket any more than Dodd. Though the current expedition is Dodd's tenth bowl appearance as a head coach, he still gets a boot out of the post-season affairs.

"I really do get a thrill out of a bowl game," Dodd replied when someone inquired if bowl contests weren't routine to him now. "When a coach doesn't, then it's time for a coach to quit coaching."

"It's a fine experience for players and coaches. I told this team that they're fortunate to be selected for a bowl. Everyone from my home town of Gales, Va., to South Dakota will be looking at Georgia Tech on TV Saturday. You'd be surprised at the large number of letters I've received from people who saw us play on TV and write to say that they're now Tech fans."

Dodd spotted Paul Rotenberry, a stickout in Tech's 21-14 triumph over Pitt in the 1956 classic, and allowed that he'd like to have him in the lineup Saturday. The mere thought of having Rotenberry, now in the Army, and Williamson in the same backfield, promoted a large smile.

"They are two great football players," Dodd said. "Few people realize just how good Williamson really is. As I've said so many times, in addition to being a great runner he's a fine blocker and a defensive standout."

The Tech boss has said, of course, that Rotenberry and Williamson are the finest all-around backs he's coached.

After concluding running, the Engineers raced to the Jax dog track to watch greyhounds run. If the 1-7 quinella came in, Penn State might as well concede defeat.

Seventeen is Dodd's lucky number, the number he wore at Tennessee. And this is his 17th season as head coach at Georgia Tech, and the 17th annual Gator Bowl.

Lions Bowl, Gator Forecast On WSB Radio

WSB Radio kicks off the big New Year's football weekend Friday night with three feature sports programs.

Headlining the program will be the Lions Bowl game direct from Bradenton, Fla., featuring the Buckhead Red Devils against the Gastonia, N.C., Little Orange Men in a battle for the Pop Warner championship. This game will be broadcast on WSB FM only, starting at 8 p.m.

First of the night's feature sports specials is set for 7:45 when sports editors Jesse Outlar of the Atlanta Constitution and Furman Bisher of the Atlanta Journal join WSB sportscaster Frank Stiteler to pick the bowl game winners.

Then at 11:20, Outlar, Bisher and Stiteler look back over 1961 to discuss the big stories of the year.

GREENVILLE, S.C. — With high-scoring Jerry Smith geared for an all-out effort, Furman University seeks revenge against Georgia Tech Friday night in the opening round of the Poinsettia Basketball Classic.

Smith and his Paladin playmates suffered one of their worst losses in many seasons when they invaded Tech's Alexander Memorial Coliseum last season. The score was 80-54.

Furman's shot for vengeance ranks as the highlight of the Poinsettia's first round card which finds favored Arkansas battling Clemson in the opener. Action starts at 7:30.

The winners will clash for the championship Saturday night while first round losers meet in a consolation game.

Coaches and other experts were generally agreed Thursday that Arkansas is the team to beat. Sparked by dazzling playmaker Jerry Cariton, the Razorbacks boast a 6-2 record and have topped such teams as Louisiana State, Ole Miss, Missouri, Oklahoma State and Tulsa.

Clemson Coach Press Maravich said, "Of the four teams in the tournament, I think Arkansas is the strongest." Tech's Whack Hyder also agreed that the Razorbacks of the Southwest Conference should be favored.

The Tech-Furman clash is rated a tossup. The Yellow Jackets showed promise in their last game, a come-from-behind win over Missouri, but still haven't come up with any real scoring punch.

Tall Rhode Island Tests Oglethorpe

By TOM STODDARD

"They look awfully impressive," said Oglethorpe basketball Coach Garland Pinholster. "Awfully impressive."

Pinholster was talking about the University of Rhode Island's basketball players, who play his Petrels at the field house at 8 p.m. Friday night. And though he hadn't even seen the Rams on the court yet, he was sincere.

"After seeing them get off that airplane, and seeing their size and heft, well, it's enough to take a lot of your confidence away," he continued. "I hope we don't embarrass them by playing too badly."

Pinholster was probably talking most about Rhode Island's hefty front wall, which consists of 6-8 Don Nilsen, 6-6 Gary Koenig, and 6-4 Charlie Lee. But even if you haven't seen any of Coach Bernie Calverley's players, you have to be impressed with Rhode Island.

The Rams are only 4-3 on the year, a slight disappointment to Calverley. Nobody, though, is disgraced by losses to Holy Cross, Fordham and Brown, the latter by just four points.

"Usually we do better against Brown, especially," Calverley said Thursday night. "But we're not too bad. We've beaten Pratt of Brooklyn, New Hampshire, Northwestern of Boston and San Francisco."

Rhode Island's two main stalwarts are Lee, a Negro, and Koenig, the 215-pound senior captain. Lee, a good driver and shooter, scored 34 points in the loss to Holy Cross.

The biggest Ram, Nilsen, is a sophomore and has played little, according to Calverley. Guard Dave Riccerio is the team's second high scorer, behind Lee, just above 15 per game. The other starter is little Mike Weiss.

The Rams favor the fast-break offense "when we can get the ball" according to Calverley. "We have had a little trouble getting

Techs Check In --- 'Ready'

Dodd, Andel Pleased as Team Arrives, Hits Gator Drills

By AL THOMY Constitution Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—All roads led to Jacksonville for the Georgia Tech football team Thursday, and at 2 p.m. all hands were accounted for in full practice routine.

One-by-one, in groups, via airliners, trains and cars, the team pulled into this sunny—if not balmy—North Florida city for their Gator Bowl date with Penn State on Saturday.

There were the usual greetings. Gator Bowl Queen Lithona Rozier, a Georgia student from Jacksonville, met the team at the airport and promised Head Coach Bobby Dodd that on this one day she would become a Georgia Tech fan.

Gator Bowl President Lamar Dean was there with his aides. Soon the entire squad was intact once more, in the Gator Bowl dressing room, happily comparing Christmas notes, joshing around and setting their mind on Saturday's opponent.

Dodd whisked them out onto the baseball field opposite the Gator Bowl and they spent an hour and a half reviewing offensive and defensive assignments and limbering up. A bitter cold wind did not dampen their spirits.

Asked if they would do a lot of running prior to the game, Dodd answered: "No, we'll just review assignments. The boys

Cold Favors Yanks In Blue-Gray Tiff

South Counts On Hunt, Fuell To Spark Big Passing Attack

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Shivering Blue-Gray players turned an anxious eye to the weather bureau Thursday to find out what Saturday's all-star football game.

A cold wave blew into the Deep South Wednesday night and left Montgomery with a 30-degree low reading and a prediction of even more frigid temperatures to come Thursday night.

But the weather bureau took a hopeful look into the maps and charts that figure in the science of forecasting, and calculated that a warming trend will be on the way by the weekend.

Temperatures probably will be in the 50s or perhaps even the low 60s by kickoff time at 1 p.m. (CST) Saturday, with the chance of some clouds overhead but little likelihood of rain.

Unpleasant weather could be an advantage to the heavier Northern team seeking the fourth Yankee victory in a row. The South is counting on speed and maneuverability, and the passing arms of Bobby Hunt of Auburn and Don Fuell of Mississippi Southern, and a wet field or numbing cold could be disastrous.

The Blue squad outweighs its rivals both on the line and in the backfield, and anything that made the footing uncertain or the ball hard to catch would help the Yanks' power plays.

On offense, the northern backs average 200 pounds, 15 pounds more than their confederate foes. The Yankee line, at 221 pounds, has a 4-pound advantage.

If the weather is conducive to a passing game, it may develop into a duel between Hunt for the Rebels and Syracuse quarterback Dave Sarette for the North. They have been handling most of the aerial chores in pregame workouts.

Kuharich, Owens Set For East-West Tilt

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The East and West teams polished up their offenses and defenses Thursday as they finished heavy work for their important appearance in the 37th annual Shrine classic at Kezar Stadium on Saturday.

Coaches Joe Kuharich of the East and Jim Owens of the West both proclaimed satisfaction with

DIETZEL: TEAM PRIDE OUR GREATEST ASSET

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Team pride exemplified by the "Chinese Bandits" defensive unit is the trademark of Louisiana State Football. It's the intangible Coach Paul Dietzel is counting on for an Orange Bowl victory over Colorado Monday.

"We don't have any stars," Dietzel explained Thursday prior to sending his Southeastern Conference co-champions through a scrimmage session. "Every week it's a different boy who leads in getting the job done."

"Our guard Roy Winston is the only one who made the all-America Colorado has all the stars. They had seven players drafted by the pros. I never remember during my time in coaching a team having so many men chosen."

Dietzel, whose three unit substitution system tends to minimize the individual, explains the pride and unity comes partly from the fact that 31 of the top 37 players on the club are Louisiana natives.

Another is evident in a comment by senior tackle Billy Booth: "There's no limit to what we can do as long as we don't worry about who's going to get the credit."

"This is a fine bunch of kids," continued the handsome young drillmaster. "I've never had so much fun coaching as this year."

Dietzel recalled he first branded a defensive squad with the name culled from "Terry and the Pirates" of the comics back in 1949 when he was a University of Cincinnati assistant. The team wasn't too successful so not many heard about it. Then two platoon football was legislated out.

At the start of 1958 practice, Dietzel thought LSU had only 16-17 players good enough to go both ways.

"We took the 11 best and made them our White team," he said. "We took the 11 best offensive players of those left and made them our 'Go' team. From the remainder we picked the top defensive men for the 'Bandits'."

"In our second game an Alabama player picked off a fumble in midair and ran down to our three. I put in the Bandits, Alabama made some mistakes, was driven back to the eight and had to settle for a field goal. From that moment the Bandits were made."

NEW YORK (AP)—The best way to start the new year and end the old is with a perfect 100 per cent score on the bowl football games.

Broken down, football selections are 60 per cent logic, 20 per cent hunch and 20 per cent luck. Let's see how the ball bounces this time for auld lang syne:

Rose Bowl: Minnesota 21, UCLA 10.

The Gophers play cautious, close-to-the-vest football in the tradition of Tennessee's Bob Neyland, but they're big, powerful and tough. Furthermore, they won't make many mistakes. However, All-America quarterback Sandy Stephens and halfback Bill Munsey should be good enough to push over three touchdowns. UCLA is a single wing team with a pair of capable tailbacks in Bob Smith and Mike Haffner but they don't have the stuff to push the big Gophers around.

Sugar Bowl: Alabama 10, Arkansas 8.

The odds-makers favor Alabama's unbeaten-untied national champions by two touchdowns, but they're reckoning without the stubborn stick-to-itiveness of this Razorback team. The Crimson Tide should win on its defense, which gave up only 22 points the entire season, but offensively Alabama's Pat Trammell and Mike Fracchia will have their match in Lance Alworth and Billy Joe Moody.

Cotton Bowl: Mississippi 24, Texas 13.

This might well be the best game of the day between two teams with a bent for attack and the weapons to do it with. Even without fullback Billy Joe Adams, injured in an automobile accident, the Ole Miss Rebels have enough racehorse backs to supply a half-dozen teams—Doug Elmore, Glynn Griffing, Perry Lee Dunn, Buck Randall, Fred Roberts, Louis Guy and Art Doty, to name a few. Texas has great striking power with Jimmy Saxton and Mike Cotton, but the Longhorns are not as many nor as big.

Orange Bowl: Louisiana State 33, Colorado 7.

Possibly the day's biggest mismatch. Coach Paul

Dietzel calls his Bayou Tigers better than the 1958 championship team, featuring Billy Cannon. L.S.U. finished the season with a 62-0 rout of Tulane and, with Wendell Harris, Jerry Stovall, Earl Gros and Lynn Amadee, may carry the momentum into the Orange Bowl game. Colorado is an explosive, come-from-behind team whose best punch is the Gale Weidner-Jerry Hillebrand pass combination but it hasn't the depth to last the full 60 minutes against loaded Louisiana.

Friday, Dec. 29:

Tangerine Bowl: Middle Tennessee 14, Lamar Tech 7.

Saturday, Dec. 30:

Gator Bowl: Georgia Tech 15, Penn State 7. The Engineers improve on their bowl record (11-3) with good defense.

Shrine game: East 25, West 14. Ernie Davis and Bob Ferguson make the difference.

Sun Bowl—Wichita 21, Villanova 8.

Arkansas' Brasher Lost for Sugar Tilt

Linebacker Tears Ligament; Razorbacks Near Camp Closing

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Arkansas received some bad news at its Sugar Bowl training camp Thursday. Linebacker Tommy Brasher definitely will miss the Jan. 1 game against Alabama.

Brasher's left knee injury turned out to be a torn ligament, a more serious injury than first thought when he was hurt in practice Wednesday.

The Razorbacks worked out in sweat clothes this morning and reviewed their aerial attack, but it was not until the full dress workout in the afternoon that the passes began to click.

Arkansas will work out twice Friday. The morning practice will be in sweat clothes and the afternoon drill probably will bring the final limited contact work before the game. The Razorbacks will end their training Saturday morning with a workout in sweat togs.

Tommy Polk of Hope, Ark., a junior letterman was moved to replace Brasher.

Rebel Drill Snappy In Icy Weather

UNIVERSITY, Miss. (AP)—The University of Mississippi football squad went through a one and a quarter hour drill in sub-freezing weather as Ole Miss prepared for Monday's Cotton Bowl game in Dallas against the University of Texas.

"The boys were real lively—they had to be to keep from freezing to death," said assistant coach Bruiser Kinard.

Three units went through both offense and defense, without contact. Pass patterns were revised against Texas defenses. Quarterbacks Perry Lee Dunn, Glynn Griffing and Doug Elmore were hitting real well.

Also outstanding in the practice were starting ends Ralph Smith, Woody Dabbs, and halfbacks Art Doty and A. J. Holloway.

Ford, Collins Miss Workout at Texas

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Two players were ailing Thursday as Texas held its next-to-last practice session at home for the Cotton Bowl game.

Tommy Ford, who rotates at the deep halfback job, was excused from training because of a fever. Jack Collins, starting wingback who has been fighting a cold, admitted feeling rocky although he went through the abbreviated drill.

The immediate diagnosis was a light flu-type cold and Coach Darrell Royal had his fingers crossed for fear it might spread as the Monday date with Mississippi approaches.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Neely Rips African, Henry Falls in Sugar

From Press Dispatches

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Top-seeded Bernard (Tut) Barten of Dallas, Tex., led the field into the semi-finals Thursday as the Sugar Bowl Tennis Tournament opened at the New Orleans Country Club.

Bartzen meets Jack Frost of Monterey, Calif., in one semi-final Friday, while Ed Neely of Atlanta faces Brazil's Carlos Fernandes in the other. Each won two matches Thursday.

Finals are set Saturday afternoon. Doubles play begins Friday morning.

Playing in frigid low-40s temperatures, Bartzen scored straight-set victories over Tulane's Lee Pentress, of Baton Rouge, La., 6-0, 6-1, and John Sharpe of Australia, 6-2, 6-1.

Neely, a former Georgia Tech star, upset South Africa's Keith Diepraam, 6-3, 7-5. Earlier, Diepraam had registered the opening day's major upset by topping second-seeded Frank Froehling of Coral Gables, Fla., rated one of the United States' top young stars. The scores were 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL—A red-hot passing duel to warm up an expected chilly night was forecast for the 16th annual Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, which pits Lamar Tech of Beaumont, Tex., against Middle Tennessee Friday night. . . . Coach Andy Gustafson of the University of Miami took a verbal swipe at collegiate all-star football games staged by private promoters during the academic year. . . . Ernie Davis, Syracuse halfback awarded the Heisman Trophy for 1961, signed a three-year contract with the Cleveland Browns of the NFL.

BASEBALL — The St. Louis Cardinals showed a $128,000 profit for the 1961 season, only because they profited by $525,000 on the sale of players to the new New York and Houston clubs.

Gators Pin Navy Five; VPI Wins

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A young Virginia Tech team fought from 17 points behind to nip Vanderbilt, 79-78, and Florida's big Cliff Layk led the Gators to a 68-63 victory over Navy in a rough game in Thursday night's openers of the Gator Bowl basketball tournament.

Florida and Virginia Tech meet for the championship Friday night after a consolation between Navy and Vanderbilt.

Layk scored 24 points on tips, jump and hook shots and used his 6-8 height to keep the Florida Gators in control of the back-boards against the Navy's top men at 6-6.

Florida used a zone defense all the way and forced Navy to take many shots from outside. Navy, using man-to-man, was quick and fast but not quite big enough.

Sophomore-dominated Virginia Tech seemed at a loss to cope with Vanderbilt's experienced passing attack and outside shooting until midway in the second half.

turn out to be the team's best point-man. He broke into the lineup two games ago, and scored 13 points to help spark the win over Missouri.

In the starting lineup with Eidson will be guard Frank Landrey, whose two free throws in the final three seconds beat Missouri; big center Alan Nass; and forwards Mike Thomasovich and another sophomore, Jimmy Tumlin.

If Tech is to win, it must find a way to contain the explosive Smith, an all-Southern Conference star last season. Smith is averaging 28 points a game.

Smith hails from Corbin, Ky., the same town which sent the famous Frank Selvy to Furman.

Jackets Check In --- Ready for Action

were instructed to run on their own over the holidays and if they didn't, two days of running won't do any good. However, I am satisfied with the appearance of the squad and I know they did run a lot on their own."

Trainer Buck Andel was of a similar opinion.

"They look mighty good to me," he said. "Actually, this bowl setup is good. We'll have as much time to get ready for Penn State as we did for, say, Tennessee or Alabama. We've studied their movies a lot longer than any other opponent during the season.

"As for our condition, this is a good bunch of boys and they stick to instructions. I don't see an overweight player out there."

Only sub-par player was tackle George Swanson, No. 2 on the left side, who picked up a little virus. But he, nonetheless, was in uniform and on the field.

First arrivals during the day were center Bobby Caldwell and end Frank Sexton, who came in by car.

Quizzed on Penn State, Caldwell said he expected to meet a team built along the lines of Auburn.

"They are big and strong, like Auburn, and run a lot of plays off tackle."

All early birds said they had followed Andel's training instructions to the letter.

"I feel great," said Caldwell. "We'll just work the next two days to get our timing back. I'm really looking forward to Saturday."

The Jackets plan a session of one-hour on the baseball field Friday before ending their preparations for State. Thursday was the first time they had been together in 12 days.

Meanwhile, Coach Rip Engle of Penn State announced that the closed-door practice policy he initiated earlier in the week would end Friday when he will hold an open practice on the baseball field.

One of the Penn State assistants, viewing the pool at the hotel where the team is staying in St. Augustine, commented, "That would be a good place to pitch Coach Engle Saturday night."

Since pool-dunking is a winning tradition, it is evident the Pennsylvanians are confident, if not cocky.

Dodd is not underestimating the Lions.

"As I have said before, they have a terrific offensive team, and if they ever get hot, they can move the ball on any team in the country. They run the trap play better than any team I've seen. Why? It's because they coach it and they believe in it. That's what it takes to excel in any phase of the game."

coach at St. Augustine, stopped by to chat with Dodd and wish him luck. . . CBS telecasters Ray Scott and George Conner planned their Tech chat by watching the Jackets work out. Conner told one on his alma mater, Notre Dame: "Someone asked Joe Kuharich the turning point of the Iowa game and he said it was right after they played the National Anthem," chuckled Conner, all-America tackle at ND.

Penn State Coach Rip Engle is one guy not afraid of the Big Ten. His teams have won four of the last five games with Big Ten schools. . . The Lions have an excellent placement kicker in halfback Don Jones, who booted six field goals and 17 extra points during the season. . . Penn State can expect to see the "outside belly" play Saturday. Tech used it for two touchdowns against Georgia, once on a 30-yard run by Williamson and again on a scamper by Stan Gann. . . Tech players and coaches went to the dog races Thursday night.

Ex-Tech assistant Marvin Bass, now coach at South Carolina, arrived in town Thursday anxious to watch his former pupils in action.

CASS PLAYERS ON MOVE IN GIRLS' AND BOYS' TOURNEY GAMES

Headland Nips Sylvan, 61-57; Southwest Boys, Girls Romp

By RAY TAPLEY

Headland's Highlanders and Southwest's boys and girls teams won berths in Friday's Tri-Cities High School Basketball Tournament finals before a capacity crowd at Russell High's gym in East Point Thursday night.

Headland edged Sylvan 61-57, in a thrilling battle of state defending champs in the feature game of the evening. Earlier, Southwest's towering Wolves surged to a surprisingly easy 67-49 victory over Marietta. Still earlier, Southwest's girls romped past College Park about as expected, 47-24.

Sylvan, without any of the players who won last year's tournament and the last two state Class AAA titles, was in the game with Headland to the very end, trailing by only one point in the final minute. But Headland, still possession most of the personnel who won last year's state Class AA crown, was too potent for the Bears in the end.

The Highlanders were without the services of star forward Fitzie Childers, who sprang an ankle in a collision with a spectator in the overflow crowd in pre-game warmups. But Charles Bussey subbed nicely, finishing with 12 points. Chipper Gallagher had 19 and Gary Ponder 13.

Four Bears scored in double figures. Charles Robinson had 16 points, Jerry Baker 15 and Steve Copeland and Johnny Boyd 11 each.

Southwest's boys led Marietta all the way, though usually by margins much smaller than the final one. Larry Hale, who won't play in Friday's finals because of religious beliefs, was the game's top scorer with 19 points, although fouling out at the start of the final period. Ricky Smith and Ricky Ricketts added 18 and 13 and Jerrod Simmons was high for the Devils with 13.

Southwest's girls, who have won the tournament every year since its inception, were never in trouble after the opening quarter. Joanie Seignious personally matched the entire College Park point total of 24.

Southwest's girls and host Russell meet at 7:30 Friday, followed by Headland and Southwest's boys at 9.

SOUTHWEST GIRLS (47) — J. Seignious 24, Furr 7, Fields 16, Pounds, G. Seignious, Williams, Tidwell, Wallace, McLucas, Mills, Jones, Turner.
COLLEGE PARK (24) — Singer 5, Bobb 12, Robb 4, Philpaw, Peterson, Parker, Holtzclaw 3, Strubling, Thompson.
SCORE AT HALF: Southwest 25, College Park 9.

BOYS
SOUTHWEST (47) — Smith 18, Gilmore 4, Ricketts 15, Legg 6, Hale 19, Ryan 2, Bagwell 2, Wallace, Glover, McLucas.

The Preparade

Hard Work, Pride, Aces Johnson And Gallagher Add Up to a Winner

By PAUL ATKINSON

How do you build a state champion in four years?

"It takes a lot of hard work," Headland High School Coach T. P. Jones was saying Thursday before his Highlanders sought win No. 11 against Sylvan in the Tri-City Invitational tournament. "We were lucky that we had a decent (12-13) opening season."

"From this start we built pride and some tradition for winning."

The climax came last season when the unheralded, hot-shooting Highlanders won the Class AA basketball championship.

Now Headland is still the hottest thing going in AA, bar none.

The two ringleaders are guard Wayne Johnson and forward Chip Gallagher. Johnson, just 5-8 or so, fronts the Highlander fast break. Gallagher is the clutch shooter from outside.

"You can't say Gallagher's the best shot in Georgia," Russell Coach Charlie Aldridge said Wednesday night, "but there can't be many better than him. He has that good jump shot, knows just when to let it go."

Rounding out Jones' starting line-up are center Gary Ponder, tallest at 6-1½, guard Hugh Causey, 5-9, and forward Fitzie Childers, 6-0. Sophomore center Charles Bussey, already 6-2 and apparently destined to be Jones' tallest player if he keeps growing, has seen considerable relief duty. Ditto Larry Carter, Jeff Payne and Jimmy Tingle.

The Highlanders' only loss this season was 17 points to Brown. "I honestly think we could beat Brown if we played 'em again," said Jones. "We were down only three, then I lost four of my five starters on fouls and we couldn't stop 'em."

One coach pinpointed the way to stop Headland. "Stop their fast break," said he, "and you have them licked. But how many teams can stop it?"

So far, only Brown. There may not be too many more this season.

NOTEBOOKING: Jenkins' 57-55 double overtime victory over Jeff Davis in the finals of the News-Press Invitational Tournament last weekend in Savannah was the school's first major sports title ever. Bubba Mock's field goal was the decider. Jenkins' Emory Lee was named Most Outstanding in the tournament. The loss was Jeff Davis' first in 12 games. . . . Athens High senior Henry Feldt is entered in the Sugar Bowl's junior tennis championships. He has been working under the eagle eye of Georgia tennis Coach Dan Magill. "Henry's added a sharp net attack to his excellent ground strokes," said Magill of the 17-year-old senior. . . . Anita Smith's 39-point spree gave her a new Crisp County scoring record. The points came in a 69-34 win over Abbeville and shattered her own school record. . . . It's the rivalry, not the records which pack 'em in at Macon. For instance, Lanier is only 1-4 on the season and Willingham 1-5, still they should draw a capacity crowd at City Auditorium Friday night.

SAM HUFF and Georgia Coach Johnny Griffith will share the speaker's rostrum Jan. 25 at the Dublin Touchdown Club's jamboree. . . . Huff, of course, is the New York Giants' rugged line-backer. . . . Osborne Coach Charles Kennedy is sold on sophomore left-handed guard Mike Nordholz, a tremendous outside shot who is averaging 15-to-20 points per game. And he'd like foes to overlook Bryan Phillips, his 6-5 center, but how can you overlook a 23-point scorer and a fellow who has plucked 47 rebounds in one game? . . . Griffin boys' record is 2-3, but D. T. Smith's Eagles have lost four games by a total of five points. . . . What a season to break in as coach. Faye Beck, wife of former Kentucky star Ed Beck, is 2-6 with Druid Hills' girls, but she has only one returning starter, 5-10 guard Sharon Sellers, from last season. . . . Druid Hills boys' Coach Pat Stephens is excited about the play of 6-2 junior forward George Cray. "He's come along in a hurry," said Stephens of the B team graduate. . . . Southwest DeKalb girls' Coach Marian Brown has a promising sophomore forward in Diane Boudreau, averaging 20 points per game.

Petrels Face Big Test

It against people like Brown, with those 6-11 boys they play."

Pinholster, who had earlier planned to start junior Darrell Whitford, 6-3, against the Rams, has decided instead to stick with Bobby Nance, 6-5 junior.

The Petrel coach said his team was "terrible" in an afternoon workout Thursday, and hoped that the old adage about bad practices bring good games would hold up.

Westminster Boys, Forsyth Girls Romp

By PAUL ATKINSON

Georgia's dissipating list of unbeaten high school teams got a double booster shot Thursday in the Atlanta Jaycee Invitational Basketball Tournament.

Westminster's Iron Men made it 11 victories in a row, belting West Fulton, 46-32, all-the-way stints by Steve Arthur, Pat Hodgson, Jerr Stallings, Allan Johnson and Jim Bostick.

D. B. Carroll's Forsyth County girls streaked to their 13th victory in a row, 43-31, over West Fulton, but it may have been a bit unlucky. For they were immediately paired with giant-killing Murphy, which rocked No. 1 seeded and defending champion Villa Rica, 57-36, on 21- and 20-point shows by Doris Spencer and Kay Brown.

In other boys games, Marist outraced Cass, 70-61, as 6-5 Terry Murray edged sophomore scoring whiz Clyde Abernathy, 30-27, in a personal scoring duel and R. E. Lee pounced on Grady, 53-31, behind Tommy Murphy's 19-point spree.

Brown, scared momentarily in the first half by Forsyth County's reaction to the Rebels' pressing defense, bombed in 44 points in the second half to score a 69-46 victory and set-up a dream third meeting with Marist in Friday's 9:30 p.m. semifinals.

Charles Casey, returning to the Brown lineup after suffering from an ankle sprain, scored 23 points and turned in tremendous backboard work. Charles Kenney, Kim King, and Billy Kinard socked in 14, 12, and 12 points. A coming-and-going crowd of 1,100 paid watched the tournament's eight games at O'Keefe's.

Lee's girls also won, outlasting Cass, 43-42, on Joannie Cavan's two free throws in the last minute. Cherokee stunned Grady, 45-32, on 16-, 13- and 12-point games by Brenda Hulsey, Leticia Epperson and Paulette Richardson.

Cavan's two pressure-packed free throws snapped a 41-41 tie, and decided the tournament's closest game. They came with 35 seconds remaining and gave her 27 points for the night. Nancy Hemphill hit 30 points for Cass, the last coming after the game was over. Since Lee had committed only four personal fouls the second half, Hemphill only got one shot instead of the usual one and one.

Top-notch defending by Nan Perkins, Nan Leslie and Nina Cagle turned the tide for Cherokee in the day's early, early opener, restricting Grady's high-scoring Connie Staten to only 23 points and 11 field goals in 36 attempts.

Bostick, Johnson, Arthur, Hodgson and Stallings scored 13, 11, 11, 7 and 4 points for Emmett Wright's Wildcats, who led 22-16 at the half, and 30-19 after three quarters. Larry Thorpe and Ed Douglas counted 10 apiece for West Fulton.

Villa Rica, girls' pre-tournament favorite, never was in it with Murphy. Lefty Thompson's Eagles, keying on superior guarding by Carol Brown, Frances Hankey, Betty Roberts and Nancy Perry zipped to 20-7, 36-17 and 47-24 leads at the quarter marks.

Lanky Murray poured in ten of 21 field attempts and 10 of 14 free throws for Marist. Abernathy, a 6-3 unorthodox shooter, hit 9 of 19 from the floor and 9 of 12 from the free throw line for J. B. Bearden's Cass team.

Of Stocks Wilts

NEW YORK (AP)—The much-heralded "yearend rally" wilted amid a welter of renewed yearend transaction for tax purposes or portfolio adjustments. The stock market ended the day mixed.

Although averages rose due to gains by some pivotal blue chips, more stocks fell than rose in the over-all list.

The long-awaited rally which began Wednesday followed through moderately in the morning, bringing the Dow-Jones industrial average close to its Dec. 13 peak of 734.91 but this market barometer fell away from its top and finished the session at 731.51, a gain of .06.

CLEAR VIEW SOUGHT

The session made it plain that the farflung investment community supposedly finished with the bulk of its tax loss selling Wednesday, had other ideas. The rise in the morning was a tentative kind of thing, inspiring little confidence in veteran Wall Streeters, so selling got under way once more, perhaps with the idea that the outlook would be clearer when 1961 was completely out of the way.

In addition, there were some unsettling news items about individual companies. One such item put American Photocopy at the top of the most active list as it fell 4 1/2%. The stock reacted to published news that it had engaged in patent infringement on a photocopying machine.

Raytheon, down 1 1/2%, was subject to rumors of resignations of top management. The rumors were officially denied.

Some of the savings and loan shares were clobbered again.

Douglas Aircraft fell 3 1/2% as the Dow-Jones news ticker quoted the firm's president as saying the firm looked for "a struggle" in 1962.

Republic Aviation also fell swiftly on adverse news, closing with a net loss of 1 1/2%. The published report was that the Pentagon is canceling plans to order an undisclosed number of F105 planes made by Republic.

Airlines responded to word that the Civil Aeronautics Board will allow 11 large trunk airlines to increase fares 3 per cent.

Prices were mixed also on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were mixed.

Grains Turn Stronger

CHICAGO (AP) — An improved commercial and speculative demand strengthened the grain futures market generally with corn among the best gainers on the Board of Trade.

Numerous contracts of wheat, corn and rye ran into the major fractional range while oats and soybeans finished both above and below previous closes.

Brokers said a good deal of the corn buying was for commercial accounts following a report that the Commodity Credit Corp. had cut its sales of the government-owned grain last week to about 22.6 million bushels, about half the volume of the preceding week.

The supposition was that the reduced movement of government grain into commercial channels would relieve some of the recent heavy pressure of hedge selling in the pit. However, the report was not construed as particularly bullish by any means.
